SOVIET COMEBACK SURGES ON

BATTERS JAIL BARS LOOSE TO MAKE ESCAPE

Youthful Prisoner Made Break Last Saturday, Sheriff Belatedly Reveals.

PICKS UP LEADS

Officers Find Youth Held In Tire Theft Series Had Been In Morrow County.

Breaking two bars in a cell block, Richard Henry Wymer, 19, escaped from the Richland county jail early Saturday morning, Sheriff Frank E. Robinson devealed today, 50 hours after the escape.

Wymer, held for grand jury investigation in connection with a series of automobile tire thefts, is still at large.

Bernard Shuster, 18, Geddes avenue, who told authorities he took Wymer to Sparta soon after he escaped, is held in jail on an open charge pending investigation by Prosecutor John O'Donnell as to whether he knew Wymer was a fugitive at the time he transported him. A more serious count may be booked.

Sheriff Robinson, who immediately upon learning of Wymer's escape started a check of all places known to be formerly frequented by him, was out of the city all day Saturday. Deputies failed to report the break, they said, for fear that such a revelation might prevent Wymer's detention. The fugitive had left a Sparta farm, where he was formerly employed, only 10 minutes before the sheriff arrived there, Robinson was told.

Using a leg from a serving table in the cell block to niche two bars at the top of the window, Wymer snapped off the bars and managed to crawl through the tiny space to escape by scaling down the outside wall of the jail on the side next to the institution's garages.

Another prisoner reported hearing Wymer as he attempted to niche the bars but told officers he did not believe sufficient progress had been made to warrant any alarm. The bars do not extend into the stone at the top of the windows but merely butt it. Held securely by a steel cross piece near the top, only a hard push was necessary to snap the upper projections, thus making the space through which he wiggled to freedom. Wymer is small of stature, weighing about 135 pounds, while a man of aver-

Police Told Woman Was Dragged Into Car, Then Attacked

A Mansfield youth was being sought by police today for questioning in connection with alleged criminal assaults and threats against the life of a West Fourth street woman early Sunday.

The woman told police that while she was walking near the Merry-Go-Round cafe, 216 North Main street, at 4:30 a. m. a youth about 20 years old, blue-eyed and dark-haired, grabbed her and dragged her into an alley at the rear of a filling station, on West Sixth street and into a car on a used car sales lot.

Here, under threat of death, the woman told police, she was forced to submit to criminal attacks several times. She related being held captive until about 8 a. m. when her assailant took her to the Green Leaf cafe, Sixth and Main streets, for breakfast, again threatening to kill her if she summoned aid or notified police.

Her assailant robbed her of $6, she told police. The woman is a native of Kentucky.

U.S. Launches Drive to Prevent 'Run' on Foods to Be Rationed

Makes Appeal To Patriotism

Food Administrator Wickard, Aided By Davis, Announces Point Ration Program To Start In February.

(Ed Press)

WASHINGTON — Government officials, having announced that all canned, dried and frozen fruits and vegetables will be rationed in February, began a concerted drive today to prevent a "run" on available supplies of foodstuffs.

They appealed to the patriotism of all Americans warning that hoarding would jeopardize the war effort and aid the Axis. They said there would be one-third less of the foods to be rationed next year, but enough for a healthful diet.

The policy of announcing rationing programs in advance of their effective date has been widely criticized. But last night three high officials answered that only confusion would result if the new program under the "points" system were started without time for explanation.

The rationing of canned, dried and frozen foods was announced by Price Administrator Leon Henderson and followed with radio explanations by Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard and Chairman Elmer Davis of the Office of War Information.

All three emphasized the danger of hoarding in the interval before rationing starts and called on Americans to clarify the good qualities of their citizenship during the next five or more weeks

"If you want to help the Axis, one of the best ways is to hoard food," Wickard said.

Henderson added: ". . . We are appealing to every citizen to understand first that he must play fair with the nation's food supply; second, that there is no justification for rushing out to the nearest grocery and stocking up; third, that whatever foods to be rationed he has on hand, he will have to declare before getting a (new) ration book."

The new program will begin sometime in February. The foodstuffs involved will be frozen for a week before rationing starts, during which time war ration book No. 2 — based on the "points" system—will be issued.

The new ration book will have two types of coupons—blue ones for canned goods, including soups, and red ones for meat which is scheduled to be rationed soon, too

Henderson emphasized that

JUST TOO WET

W. Virginian Says Rain Kept Him From Draft Registration.

CHARLESTON, W. Va.—(U.P.)—George Randolph, 40, who failed to register for selective service on registration day because it was raining and "there wasn't any use getting wet," pleaded guilty today to a violation and was held for action by a federal grand jury.

"When I looked out on registration day last February and saw it was raining I just decided there wasn't any use getting wet," Randolph told federal agents who arrested him.

A former coal miner who became a hermit "for no good reason at all," Randolph was arrested at his cave in the Huntington, W. Va., dump last week after residents complained of a "vagrant living in the city dump."

TIGHTEN UP ON LIMITED BUYING

Mansfield Grocers Restrict Canned Goods Purchases; No Rush Reported.

Announcement that the federal government will begin rationing of some 200 items of canned foods, today brought a tightening in Mansfield stores of restrictions on purchases of canned foods.

Although there were only a few instances today where grocers received requests to buy large quantities of canned foods, retailers indicated they would tighten up on limited buying regulations in efforts to prevent a buying rush.

Almost without exception, food dealers have been limiting customers to one, two and three cans of fruit and vegetables for the past two months or more. Canned pineapple and several other fruits and their juices come under the classification of one can to a customer.

Some retailers reported customers appearing at his store today with requests for large quantities of canned goods while others reported that the public reaction to the point rationing program was "generally good."

Another detective wounded Marchese, ending a running gun battle. Hammond is in a critical condition.

Patrolmen Glen Adams, Earl Kora and William Taylor reported that after Lightfoot's auto struck the car of Kenneth Mosier, 134 Spruce street, in front on Park avenue west last night, it continued through a red light at Mulberry street and collided with a Jones Memorial hearse at Brinkerhoff avenue.

DIE IN FIRE

Father, Crippled Son Perish In Columbus Blaze.

COLUMBUS —(INS)— A father and his crippled son perished today in a fire which swept the inside of their two-story brick dwelling. The fire victims were George W. Elliott, 45, a disabled World war veteran, and his son George, jr., 11, whose right leg was amputated several years ago.

Mrs. Elliott, 47, and another son, John, 13, leaped from second story windows. Besides suffering second degree burns, the mother received a leg fracture in the fall. John alighted on a small shed and was unhurt.

Neighbors saw the father, with George, jr., in his arms, kick out a window pane, apparently intending to jump with the boy in his arms. But before he could do so, he fell backward and he and the boy were burned to death.

Streams Swollen By Rains And Thaw, Spill Over Banks

Flood conditions, due to thawing snow and incessant rains, have made two county roads in the northern part of Richland county unsafe for travel, state route 13 at the northern edge of Bellville submerged as the Clear Fork river rampages out of its banks and other hazards are anticipated.

County Engineer Howard C. Sword today reported that the Lyberger road in Cass township and the Rome South road in Bloominggrove township became impassable when the Black Fork river roared out of its channel to overflow the highways. About 18 inches of flood water covered the roads at noon.

County roads in the Bellville area were expected to be under water soon as ditches and small streams poured torrents into the Clear Fork, Sword said.

Several inches of snow which fell 10 days ago has practically vanished in the unseasonal thaw which set in last mid-week, Sword said. The unusually heavy rainfall has added to the flood perils.

Ditches throughout the county are running full, many are overflowing and the larger streams are inundating lowlands along their courses.

At Bellville, route 13 was still passable at noon at the point where it parallels the Clear Fork for several hundred yards.

ARMS OUTPUT QUADRUPLED, SAYS NELSON

Reports November Production Shows Biggest Gain Since U. S. Started to Rearm.

SWELLED 12 PER CENT

WPB Chief Says Many Plants Operate Only at Half of Full Capacity.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Production Chief Donald M. Nelson reported today that November arms production showed the greatest monthly gain since the United States began to re-arm in the summer of 1940.

Nelson said that last month about four and one-third times more war material was turned out in American war plants than in the month before the Japanese assault on Pearl Harbor.

In 1943, he said, this country expects to produce about twice as many arms as were produced this year. Total war expenditures should exceed $90,000,000,000 compared with more than $52,000,000,000 in 1942, he added.

Nelson said the percentage increase in the output of planes, tanks, guns, ammunition, ships and other war materials in November was 12 per cent, compared with an increase of 4 per cent in October. He pointed out that the November figure breaks a six-month series of declining percentages of gain

He explained that although a larger percentage of increase was scored by American industry in April over March, the actual gain in production was not as great as in November because production now is much greater.

Here is a box score of November production increases over October:

Airplanes, up 18 per cent; ordnance, up 13 per cent; army

British Drive Now 180 Miles From Tripoli

Allies Keep To Attack On All Fronts By Land And Air As French And Russians Tally Important Gains In Severe Fighting.

BULLETIN

LONDON—(AP)—A Reuters dispatch from Allied headquarters in North Africa said a large force of Flying Fortresses rained high explosives on the docks and harbor at Sousse in Tunisia yesterday and blew up one ship.

(By Associated Press)

Russia's comeback offensive surged ahead in the bitter cold of all four major fronts on Hitler's eastern flank today while a correlated Allied sweep across North Africa pressed to within 180 miles of Tripoli, where Marshal Rommel's retreating columns were reported streaming on into Tunisia for a last stand.

In every phase of fighting, on land and in the air, from the Russian front to North Africa, the Allies were keeping to the attack and the Axis battled for time.

The continued British advance upon Tripoli was announced in a Cairo communique which said "yesterday our troops were in contact with the enemy in the Wadi Bei El Chebir area, 40 miles west of Sirte."

That represented a thrust of almost half the distance to Tripoli from El Agheila since Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's British Eighth army overran that Libyan defense line two weeks ago.

From both sides, Allied bombers battered the Axis-held ports of Tunisia Flying Fortresses pounded Bizerte and Sfax. Only two of the big bombers were lost, and two ships at Sfax were reported sunk. The Cairo communique announced raids Saturday night on Tunis and Sousse.

On the mud-clogged Tunisian land front, Gen. Henri Honore Giraud's French North African troops were proving their worth in the Allied battleline.

They announced an important advance south of Pont-Du-Fahs, some 30 miles south of Tunis, where they hold the southern flank of the Allied line with Americans in the center and British to the north.

Thus was one of two French forces reported to have thrust

PARLEY: Giraud, De Gaulle Work For French Empire Unity

BULLETIN

LONDON — (INS) — Gen. Charles De Gaulle, leader of the Fighting French, will fly to North Africa for conversations with General Henri Honore Giraud and Lieut.-General Dwight Eisenhower before coming to the United States to visit the White House, it was forecast reliably here today.

(By United Press)

LONDON — Gen. Charles De Gaulle, Fighting French leader, and Gen. Henri Honore Giraud, new French chieftain in Africa, have been negotiating for 48 hours on unification of all French empire forces and have already pledged their mutual willingness to cooperate with one another, reliable informants said today. Negotiations were now centered on arrangements for an early meeting between De Gaulle and Giraud, and it was believed in some quarters that it might take place in the next 10 days.

There were unconfirmed reports that De Gaulle also would go to Washington to confer with President Roosevelt, and might be accompanied by Gen. Georges Catroux, Fighting French leader for the Middle East.

It was believed that De Gaulle might go to Africa to confer with Giraud, newly elected French high commissioner in succession to assassinated Admiral Jean Francois Darlan.

De Gaulle has desired a conference with President Roosevelt since soon after the Allied landings in northwest Africa, Darlan became the recognized French African leader.

De Gaulle lunched yesterday with Prime Minister Winston Churchill, discussing the situation which had arisen as the result of

WARNING: Tojo Informs Japs The Real War's Only Starting

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The navy announced today that the Japanese had dropped supplies by parachute to their hard-pressed forces on Guadalcanal island, but the parachutes and their cargo were discovered on the ground and bombed and strafed by United States army planes.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—A grim warning that the United Nations are planning important counter-strokes and that "the real war" is only starting was given the Japanese people over the week-end by their premier and war minister, Gen. Hideki Tojo, but was sugared somewhat by flamboyant Japanese claims that the American, British and Netherlands navies had lost 38 per cent of their ships.

In an address to the diet, broadcast by the Japanese and German radios, Tojo pointed out tough military problems in the Solomons, the Aleutians, India, and China, and declared Japan was busy day and night "providing against air raids and preparing for future war developments."

He gave the account as an apparent warning that no early victory cohld be expected, but declared Japan had been strengthened by receiving from conquered areas in the South Pacific 1,800,000 tons of raw materials, or 70 per cent more than Nippon's needs for a whole year.

Naval Minister Admiral Shige-

WARNING! Careful Survey Shows 50% OF OHIO CAR OWNERS ARE HEADED FOR TROUBLE!

1 out of every 2 have not yet changed oil

...now face serious damage to their cars

Ohio car owners are headed for trouble! Nearly 50%, according to the impartial survey made less than 10 days ago, have not changed to winter grade lubricants. More important—almost 40% say they do not intend to change, apparently believing they won't need to prepare their cars for winter because their driving has been cut drastically by rationing.

Such a conclusion is entirely wrong and may result in these cars being seriously damaged—or even put out of service permanently!

Actually, driving less makes winterizing more necessary than ever. The reason is that slow-speed driving and short trips don't get your car fully "warmed up," thus increasing dilution, moisture content and the formation of harmful substances in your motor oil. (For full details, see below.)

If you still have heavy, slow-flowing summer oil in your car, it has probably already become seriously diluted and dirty—and can't give your car adequate protection!

In addition, this heavy summer motor oil and your summer gear lubricants act as a "drag" on your motor—waste gasoline. They make starting harder and gears difficult to shift. They reduce the power in your battery due to the "drag." Due to their failure to flow quickly and efficiently in winter weather they expose your car's engine and gears to dangerous, excessive wear.

Today's only safe course is to put in proper winter grade motor oil and gear lubricants without delay. Car manufacturers, petroleum engineers, your government advise you to do it. So have it done now—somewhere. We suggest that you come to SOHIO and get our Winter Starting Guarantee at no extra cost, for your further protection. But, in any event, change now—that's the important thing.

Remember—today your car is just as much a part of America's Fighting Force as our ships or our railroads. It is transportation that America needs to win!

SPARK
WATER ACCUMULATES HERE
GAS AND AIR EXPLODE
MOISTURE-LADEN GASES "BLOW BY" PISTON, TURN TO WATER
WATER FREEZING IN THE BOTTOM OF SUMP STOPS FLOW OF OIL

HERE'S WHY TODAY'S DRIVING CONDITIONS MAKE CHANGING OIL SO IMPORTANT

For every gallon of gasoline you burn, nearly a gallon of water is produced in your engine. Under normal driving conditions your motor "got hot" and boiled off most of this water. But today, with short-trip, slow-speed, "cold motor" driving, that doesn't happen. More water gets in and stays in your crankcase. It combines with dust particles, fuel soot, etc. to form heavy, gummy sludge that may block off the flow of oil to vital parts—combines with gases to form acids which may attack the metal.

Use light, fast-flowing winter grade oil to give your motor proper protection in cold weather—and change it often to get rid of the sludge, acids and other harmful products that form.

MRS. JAMESON GIVES COSTUME RECITAL

Enjoyable Program Presented By Well-Known Soprano At Christmas Tea of Mansfield Music Study Club On Sunday.

By ELLEN CRAMER

MUSIC LOVERS gathered yesterday afternoon in the Mansfield-Leland hotel to hear Edith Fletcher Jameson in her colorful costume recital presented by the Music Study club for their annual Christmas tea to which the public was invited.

To make the program more enjoyable and realistic, Mrs. Jameson dramatized the characters which she portrayed in four different periods including the 17th and 18th centuries, gypsy, Oriental and modern American life.

Although the merit of her selections could scarcely be compared because of the difference in types, the three concert numbers by modern American composers seemed to best show her ability and fine tones in the upper register. Of these, "The Last Song" by James H. Rogers was especially good. In this one, Mrs. Minnie Marks Cahall was given an opportunity to show excellent piano accompaniment. Frank La Forge's "Into the Light" and "Last Hour" by Walter Kramer were the other modern selections. For this part Mrs. Jameson wore a blue formal gown with silver accessories.

Most picturesque of the group were the 17th and 18th century songs, for which the singer appeared in a traditional dress worn by ladies of the court of that period. "Have You But Seen a Whyte Lillie Grow" transcribed from old Chaucerian English by Ben Johnson and written by an unknown composer was the most popular number of the four songs here in which Hadyn's "My Mother Bids Me Bind My Hair" was included.

Coming out in a gay gypsy costume, Mrs. Jameson sang for her third group of the robust life of gypsies. Henry Park's "A Gypsy Maiden I" for which the artist used castanets received an enthusiastic response from the audience. Portraying a young gypsy girl telling of life, Mrs. Jameson sang a selection by Donizetti and concluded the period with a lullaby "Nana" by Manuel de Falla.

An entirely different type of music was offered in the Oriental period group, including "Moo Lee Flower" and two songs by Kathleen Lockhart Manning, "Chinoise" and a dramatized selection of the Rickshaw man, "Hop Li."

Miss Pearl Danback assisted with flute accompaniment for "Chinese." To conclude that period Mrs. Jameson sang "The Feast of the Lanterns" whose title indicates its nature.

Between changes of costumes for each group Mrs. Cahall played short piano selections. To give background for this period, Rev. David N. Roller appeared as narrator.

Honoring Mrs. Margaret Hall, well-known Mansfield pianist, Mrs. Jameson sang one of the former's compositions "My Garden" as her encore.

Approximately 90 members and friends of the club were present for the concert. Tea was served afterwards with Miss Florence MacDonald, president of the Music Study club as hostess.

When Mr. and Mrs. Charles Caugherty, 138 Rowland avenue, went to Port Clinton Sunday to see their two soldier-sons, they were pleasantly surprised with a dinner given at the Island hotel. In honor of their parents' silver wedding anniversary, Sgt. and Mrs. Charles Caugherty, jr., and Pfc. William Caugherty entertained 25 guests, including members of the immediate family and several friends from Camp Perry.

Silver heirloom candle holders contained pink tapers and the dinner was served on silver plates. Mr. and Mrs. Caugherty were the recipients of many lovely gifts of silver. Their wedding was an event of Dec. 27, 1917, in Pittsburgh, Pa. They have made their home in Mansfield for the past 25 years.

Besides the two sons at Camp Perry, Mr. and Mrs. Caugherty have three other children: Mrs. J. H. Russell of San Diego, Calif., and John and Eileen at home

HOROSCOPE

For Tuesday, Dec. 29.

Excellent opportunities for advancement and popularity, as well as noteworthy achievement of cherished objectives are indicated by the lunar and mutual aspects in this day's astrological map. It may be a time for steadily advancing upon such high goals through well-organized plans and practical constructive techniques, attracting the support of capital or other influential persons as well as public interest.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of increased production, progress, enhanced prestige and popularity, as well as advancement in fortunes and career, with the co-operation of those in influence and public authority. Sound projects, though large and of major importance, if established on reasonable basis, with constructive and well-ordered plans and techniques, may be confidently worked for, although there should be some restraints as to outlay of funds or other extravagances.

A child born on this day should have much talent, versatility, efficiency and sound worth and ambitions to reach important places and power in either public or private life. It might be directed as to thrift and use of funds.

SARAJANE DIEHL WEDS DON V. M'LAUGHLIN

Ceremony Takes Place In First Methodist Church At 4:30 Sunday Afternoon: Reception Held At Diehl Home.

IN A LOVELY ceremony in the First Methodist church yesterday at 4:30 p. m., Miss Sarajane Diehl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Foster Gail Diehl, 41 Douglas avenue, became the bride of Don Vernon McLaughlin.

The church was beautifully decorated with palms, fern and one large poinsettia plant. Illuminating the scene were four seven-branch candelabras and a large Christmas tree, which was placed in one corner of the church. Rev. E. G. Corwin read the ceremony.

The bride was escorted to the altar and given in marriage by her father. She was attired in a gown of white faille taffeta, the full skirt of which was covered with an extremely full double net skirt with a slight train. The long tight, bodice buttoned down the back. The gown had a sweetheart neckline and sleeves of three-quarter length.

To the orange blossom headpiece, was attached the full fingertip veil, which the bride wore virgin style. She carried a white prayer book, covered with white rosebuds, from which hung satin streamers. Her jewelry was a locket, a gift from the bridegroom.

Miss Dorothy Diehl, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor. She wore a full, white marquisette skirt attached to a bodice of poinsettia red silk jersey made with long, tight-fitting lines, three-quarter length sleeves and sweetheart neckline.

The gowns of the bridesmaids, Miss Billie McQuillen and Miss Leona Hout, were fashioned along the same lines as that of the maid of honor with the exception of the color of the bodices, which were in holly green. Down the sides of the skirts extending from the bodices to the bottom of the skirts were garlands of flowers in red and green. Instead of the usual bouquets, the attendants carried white leather Bibles with rosepoint lace hankies tied in the Bibles with white satin ribbons. These were the gifts of the bride. All the attendants wore small ostrich tipped hats with long streamers in colors matching their gowns, and strands of pearls.

Benny McLaughlin served as his brother's best man. Ushers were Robert Harding Diehl and Bruce McLaughlin. Mrs. Diehl attended her daughter's wedding in a brown ensemble trimmed in blue. She wore a corsage of pink and white roses and sweetpeas. Mrs. Mojeska McLaughlin, mother of the groom, wore a gown of black with matching accessories and a corsage of red and white roses and sweet peas.

Immediately after the ceremony, a reception was held at the bride's home for 50 guests. When the couple left on their wedding trip, the bride was dressed in a wool jersey frock of light blue. The former Miss Diehl is a graduate of Mansfield Senior high school. She also attended Office Training school in Columbus. At present she is employed in the office of Westinghouse.

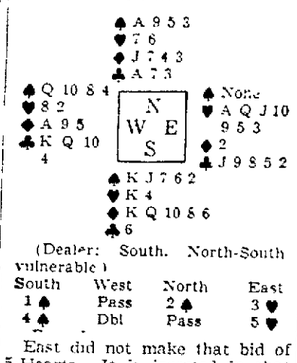
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

EITHER REASON ENOUGH

Business doubles may be taken out for either of two reasons—one of them because you believe the opponents can make their doubled contract, the other because you believe your side can make a very profitable contract. Both of those reasons can be combined in some situations. This is especially so when you are sure your partner's double is based partly on some bid you made, and you can not deliver the high card strength he had every right to expect, but you do have significant distribution, with terrific length in one or two suits.



(Dealer: South. North-South vulnerable.)

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	3 ♥
4 ♠	Dbl	Pass	5 ♥

East did not make that bid of 5-Hearts. It is inserted in that table only as the call he should have made. And, when the deal was over, he bawled out his partner on the basis that West should not have doubled when he knew, from the opponents' strong bidding while vulnerable, that there was not much left for him to hold except some pretty good suit length.

West was not at fault at all. He should have been decapitated if he had failed to double that 4-Spades bid The one who went wrong was East, who should have taken out the double. From his standpoint, it should have been clear that his partner could not take many spade tricks when such an emphatic fit had been shown by North and South. Consequently West's main high card strength must have been in the minors, right where East wanted it in order to make a contract of his own

As it developed, South made his doubled 4-Spades, losing one trick in trumps plus one each in hearts and diamonds. East could have made his 5-Hearts with ease, losing tricks only in trumps and clubs. If he had made that bid, North and South would have had a tough problem to decide whether to sacrifice or not.

(Dealer: North. North-South vulnerable.)

If West leads the A and another club, how would you play the trump suit in this deal to make 4-Spades?

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

"All right, I go." Gus capitulated suddenly, and called out to Joe as the traffic lights changed. "Wait till I get out before you start, then go on to that place near the hotel and wait for me. Missis Graham, you please lock this door."

"Yes, Gus," I promised docilely, and when he had dropped to the curb I locked the door and Joe again sent the car on its way.

We drew up just below the hotel, and the doorman, whose face I never had liked, looked sharply at the car, then obsequiously came out.

"Ah, Mrs. Graham!" he said through the window, which I had hastily lowered, without unlocking the door, "let me take those," indicating the packages lying on the seat beside me.

He tried to open the door, then smiled at me.

Spied on By Doorman.

"You are locked in," he said, patently expecting that I would unlock the door.

I was sure he was one of Milner's staff of "listeners in," but managed to smile.

"I am not going to get out just yet," I said. "I am waiting for a man to return from an errand. I will not be disturbing anybody if the car stands here about five minutes, will I?"

"You know that you could stay here fifty times five minutes, Mrs. Graham," he said extravagantly, then went back to his post.

I satisfied myself that if we kept the newspaper Gus was bringing down on the seat between us, the doorman could not see that we were looking it over, so when Gus returned, I spoke so low that no one else could hear, even before I unlocked the door.

Madge Is Cautious.

"Don't take out the paper until after you get in," I said, "and then only when I tell you. That doorman is watching us."

Gus muttered a picturesque epithet describing the doorman as he climbed in and took his seat beside me.

"Do not lift the paper above the lower level of the window," I said. "Lay it down on the seat between us."

Then I spoke to Joe.

"Will you please watch that doorman, and any of the bell boys who happen to be out there near the door," I said, "and if any one of them starts this way, say 'Watch out!'"

"Okay!" Joe answered.

"If Joe calls out," I told Gus, "sit on the paper quickly and pretend to be showing me one of the parcels."

Then I turned my attention to the paper.

"Was there a picture on the page the man was studying?" I asked.

"Yes," Gus said, "there was, but I couldn't see what it was."

"Never mind!" I consoled him, "that helps." We won't have to look at any page which has no picture. Now turn the pages and see if you can recognize the page at which the man was looking."

Gus quickly eliminated the front page, then began to examine the others more slowly, and there was decision in the way he put one by one aside and said, "Not this one."

He was more than half through the paper when he stopped longer than usual at a page, then looked up.

"This looks like it," he said, "but I'm not sure."

My throat muscles constricted as I saw that the page was the one that contained the column of "personals."

DINA CASHMAN + + +

By Kathleen Norris

(Copyright, 1942.)

CHAPTER XX

She sat down suddenly and asked Art for some water, which he gave her in a cracked old jelly glass, and things went on being dream-like and unreal. Rogers explained that the long trip had upset Geraldine and that she was tired.

"Reno! You don't mean that you were just divorced!" her mother exclaimed.

"Oh, no. My wife died five years ago. But in Reno you can arrange a marriage easier than in San Francisco."

Then they were out in the muddy lane again, the Cashmans gathering against the red light of the doorway to wish them bewildered good-byes. Rogers gave Dina his arm over the planks and puddles, and she got into the car and sank into her seat feeling that at any minute she might faint.

After that it was effort upon effort. An effort to get out of the car, to mount the steps to the Holland doorway, to climb the stairway within; an effort to show her ring to Mrs. Bucket and begin to take off her clothes.

But the piled pillows of the old mahogany bed were deep and soft, and her icy feet struck a hot-water bottle between the smooth, thick sheets. There was a tray with soup and chicken on it, and a blazing coal fire, and softened lights. Dina lay deep in luxury as if she would never move again. She ate languidly, soon satisfied, smiled her acknowledgement when Mrs. Bucket put two books on her bedside table.

"I picked 'em for you because I used to like 'em, but they're real old-timy," the housekeeper said.

"Oh, thank you!"

"Mr. Holland said to say good night to you and that if you felt badly tomorrow we'd telephone Doctor Lilienthal."

"I won't. I really feel fine and am glad my people know!" Dina stretched out her hand on the blankets. "Thank you for everything," she said, her tone saying much more than her words.

For a long time she lay still after the housekeeper had left her. Her thoughts surged about aimlessly—now a feeling of wonder that Papa had not made more of a scene, now a regret that Myrna had chanced to wash her hair that afternoon and had had it bound up in a rag.

Again in the wide, grim, rubber-scented passages of the City Hall where they had gone for the license; again in the clergyman's stuffy parlor, and the two strange and interested witnesses.

The Reverend Kirkham had been unmarried, but his housekeeper or perhaps it had been his servant—had been glad to oblige; the other witness—what had been his name? Barker?—a neighbor living next door. And always, under and over all the other sensations, they were in the car again, rolling on and on and on.

Three times—or was it four times?—she had had to get out because she was ill! She had been ill in the hotel dressing room in Reno. Why had not Rogers been disgusted enough with her to abandon the whole plan? Why had he not walked out when his eyes had fallen upon the Cashman kitchen and the head of the Cashman family seated in his shirt sleeves at the cluttered table?

She must accept everything serenely, Dina told herself, and keep herself busy, and make them all, Rogers and the servants, like her.

Every morning her breakfast came upstairs on a tray at eight o'clock. At Mrs. Bucket's suggestion she stayed in bed for a while afterward, reading the newspaper or reading one of the old-fashioned novels.

At ten she dressed and went downstairs, wandering out into the garden if the day was fair, gathering flowers for vases, talking with the old Scotch gardener. At noon Rogers appeared; sometimes only to tell her that he was going to San Francisco and would be gone for both lunch and dinner, sometimes to lunch with her, completely absorbed in the newspapers and mail. Afterward he might tell her that he had to go on some errand; to see a stamp collector about a rare stamp he had heard he possessed, to see his broker, to interview banker or lawyer, and when he went he was perfectly willing to take her along.

Dina roamed about San Francisco contentedly enough, picked up little presents for her mother and sisters, drifted into a movie. She and Rogers would be quite silent, driving home, the man usually asleep.

But for dinner she always changed her dress and made her hair look as well as she could. And in the new gown that she and Mrs. Bucket had bought Rogers' eyes approved her, even though he rarely complimented her in words. Whatever chills or misgivings the day had brought were dissipated when she was dressed and fires were lighted and she and Rogers talked through the meal. He laughed at her, asked her questions, and in the evening they played cards.

There was a small car for her use, not a new car, but far better than the Cashman's old jalopy. Dina could drive in the afternoon to see her mother and sisters. She had hesitated to make the first call, dreading questions and criticism, and had asked Rogers' advice.

"Just tell 'em yes and no," he had said. "And immediately ask questions. Keep 'em talking about themselves."

So Dina had gone down to make the dread visit and had found Rogers' counsel excellent. Her mother did indeed ply her with all sorts of queries, but Dina answered them briefly and amiably and brought the conversation promptly to matters domestic. Art's cold was better? How was Donny's? Myrna was going out nights; Pop oughtn't to allow that.

The home kitchen struck her as strangely grimy and cramped after the bigness of the Holland mansion. Had things always been so cracked and stained, spotted and streaked?

Mrs. Cashman was doing the week's washing. She always washed on Mondays, the wet garments on the line in the yard even if the rain was falling. Sometimes they dangled and blew there for days.

Today she was sousing small articles up and down in the dishpan.

"What sort of a place are you living in, Dina?"

"The old Holland place. Near Burlingame, in the hills."

"Nice place?"

"Old-fashioned. But big and comfortable. You'll have to come up and see it sometime, Mama."

"That's what Pop was saying. You've got help, haven't you?"

"Oh yes."

"Cook?"

"Chinese cook."

"Is he real well fixed, Dina?"

"Yes, I guess he is. I never asked."

"We all thought it was Vere you fancied; seemed it was his uncle all the time," Ethel Cashman said innocently. "But what I can't get over is your falling in love with a man old enough to be your father. That gets me. Quite a few people, people round here, were asking about it. Tom O'Connor talked to Art."

"He did?" Dina's face crimsoned. "Here, I'll hang these out for you," she said. She went into the back yard with the familiar old basket of wet wash, stood at the line with the sweet, warm spring breeze blowing over her forehead. Other women were hanging out wet Monday's clothes. Presently her mother followed her out and began to pin children's socks to the line in bunches of four and six.

"Don't you need more clothespins Mama?"

"Well, I could do with a few more, Dina. I declare, I don't know where they go!"

"I see Meyer has got his awning out." Dina stood stretching her shoulders, smiling in the sun. On her way home, she thought, she would stop at Meyer's and send Mama home a grocery order including clothes-pins and dish towels.

"What do his folks think of Mr. Holland's getting married, Dina?"

"He hasn't many folks. Vere's off on a sea trip, and his father—Vere's father—is a lawyer in New York with a second wife."

"Vere's mother dead?"

"No, she lived here with his sister, Mimi Holland. But I don't know that they know Rogers and I are married yet. The newspapers haven't printed it."

"What's the sense of keeping a thing like that a secret? It's got to come out. What do his friends think when they come to the house and find you living there?"

"They don't come, Mama. He lives almost alone, taking care of the place, fussing with his stamps—he's crazy about collecting stamps—and sometimes riding before breakfast. He has some horses there. Then there's a ranch down San Bernardino way, and he says in the summer he goes down there for about a month. But we've been married only two weeks tomorrow, and nobody has come in yet."

"Well, he's pretty well fixed!" her mother said, duly impressed. "He must have a lot, I should say, but seems to me that's an awful lonely way for you to live, Dina. But I suppose newly married folks don't mind that."

When she got home at five o'clock Dina gave Rogers a spirited report. She found him in the garden, discussing a bed of tulips, primulas, and hyacinths with McPherson, and they stood there together in the late bland flood of the sunset.

Dina had taken off her hat; her hair, damp from its pressure, was tight against her forehead in rings and spirals. Her face was a little pale from fatigue and from the unwonted warmth of the day, but the pallor seemed to make her blue eyes darker and her lips more red.

"So you got your mother clothespins?" Rogers said.

"And dishtowels and everything else you could think of. The girls went with me, and we each took a basket and went the rounds at Meyers. Peaches and soup and bacon and cake flour—everything! They all went home with lollipops, except Myrna of course; she was too grand. Meyer wants Myrna to come into the store this summer, and she says that if she can hold the job she's not going back to school. She's only second-year high, though, and I don't believe Pop will let her."

"She impressed me as precocious, but she's pretty. Hello! Rogers broke off to say in a tone of annoyance. "Here are callers!"

The approaching car swung round the drive, stopped. A woman jumped out and then a man, Aline and Andrew Havens.

Aline came straight to Rogers, a newspaper in her hand.

"Is this true?" she demanded. "Aline, hello!" Rogers greeted her amiably "Hello, Havens. Nice people, to come see us!"

"Is this true?" Aline asked a second time, showing the newspaper. "I just saw it. We were driving down to Menlo and I happened to get a paper."

"Yes, of course," Rogers said pleasantly. "Geraldine, I'm afraid the news is out. We're in the evening paper. I should have supposed dear Caroline would have told you, Aline."

"Why it's preposterous!" Aline said indignantly. "Caroline and Mimi are in Honolulu," she went on. "I had no idea of it! Nobody had any idea of it! When were you married?"

CONTAGIOUS COLDS NOW SPREADING!

Put VICKS PLAN To Work Today!

Medically-Supervised Tests Show How Simple Home Plan

CUT SICKNESS FROM COLDS MORE THAN 50%

Fewer colds!...Shorter colds!...50% less sickness from colds! —that's the certified record of Vicks Plan in a great medically-supervised winter test among 2650 children. Right in your own home, this easy guide may do less—or it may even do more for you and your family. But with colds on a rampage, this tested plan is certainly worth trying today! Get full details in your package of Vicks.

IT'S EASY—HERE'S WHAT YOU DO

Observe A Few Simple Health Rules. Live normally. Avoid excesses. Eat simple food. Drink plenty of water. Keep elimination regular. Get plenty of rest and sleep. Avoid crowds and people who have colds.

At First Sniffle or Sneeze, put a few drops of clinic-tested Vicks Va-tro-nol up each nostril. Use as directed in package. This specialized medication is expressly designed to aid your natural defense against colds—and if used in time, Va-tro-nol helps prevent many colds from developing. (Even when your head is all stuffed up from a mean head cold, Vicks Va-tro-nol relieves distress, makes breathing easier.)

If a Cold Does Develop, or Slips By Precautions, rub clinic-tested Vicks VapoRub on back, as well as on throat and chest. VapoRub penetrates to the cold-congested upper bronchial tubes with soothing medicinal vapors. It stimulates throat, chest, and back surfaces like a warming poultice. This penetrating-stimulating action works for hours to relieve miseries of colds . . . even while you sleep!

NOTE: If the miserable symptoms of the cold are not relieved promptly—or if more serious trouble seems to threaten—call in your family doctor.

Sport Podge

by REX HESS

A year ago, with a newly-declared war on our hands, we faced a new year wondering what it would do to sports, and just about expecting sports to do a complete fade-out in 1942.

Here are some of the questions we asked:

Can we get enough players together for softball leagues and golf leagues, and bowling leagues, and basketball leagues?

Can we get balls for golf and tennis? Can we get equipment for bowling alleys?

The prospect didn't appear very bright for a positive answer on any of those questions.

Time stands still. With another year coming up, the same questions are being asked, and in many places an inclination is being shown to throw up the sponge and call it a day for sports.

Added to the difficulties of a year ago are such things as transportation problems, and rationing. While the list of young, active men available for participation in team sports grows rapidly smaller.

This you can bet on: Where two guys come together with golf sticks or bowling balls in their hands, there will be sport of a sort.

The city softball league next summer probably will have a tougher time finding players than it did this year, but I don't look for it to make the same mistake that it did a year ago—delay action on organization for fear of not being able to complete a schedule.

State championships in golf may be ruled out next summer, but that's no reason to eliminate league play and tournaments here. Although it was freely predicted last fall that the Richland county tourney would be dropped for the duration.

Golf can carry on if balls are available. And it won't need the vast supply of balls required in the past.

This is a time for tightening of belts. And a lot of golfers discovered last summer they didn't need a new ball every time they stepped on No 1 tee.

Balls with smiles from side to side will whistle down the fairways next summer, until the cover actually comes off. But golfers are a hardy lot. They'll keep on playing.

So this year I don't think I'll worry much about the outlook for sport in the coming twelvemonth.

All-Stars Win Over Redskins

Artoe's Field Goal Brings Victory Margin.

By ROBERT S. BARKDOLL

PHILADELPHIA — (U.P.) — The Washington Redskins still reigned as champions of the National Prefessional Football league today but their record was somewhat tarnished by a 17-14 loss to the League All-Stars in the post-season pro bowl game.

* * *

Coach Heartley (Hunk) Anderson, co-pilot of the Chicago Bears and Lee Artoe, Bears' tackle, were the happiest men on the squad for both derived some measure of revenge for the 14-6 defeat their team suffered at the hands of the Redskins in the league's title playoff.

It was Anderson who coached the professional All-Stas to their triumph over the Redskins yesterday before 18,671 fans at Shibe Park and it was Artoe's artistic toe which provided the winning margin early in the fourth quarter with a 43 yard field goal that sailed squarely between the uprights.

At the start of the game, it looked as though the Redskins—playing without Sammy Baugh, who failed to appear, would have things pretty much their own way as the All-Stars were unable to click with any combination of players.

The hard-charging Red-skins' line broke through frequently to throw the Stars for losses. Midway in the first period, Harry Hopp of the Detroit Lions, kicked from his own 11. Ki Aldrich, Washington center, grabbed the ball off the ground on the 40 and raced unmolested for the score. Bob Masterson converted.

The other Redskin score came in the third. Roy Zimmerman who made a valiant bid to fill the Baugh's shoes, filled the air with passes. With the ball on the Stars' 45, he tossed to Masterson who carried to the 16. Two plays later, Zimmerman passed to Bob Seymour who ran over from the five. Again, Masterson converted.

The Stars got their first break in the third when Bill Dudley, Pittsburgh Steelers' back, snatched Zimmerman's short pass out of the air on his own 3 and raced 97 yards for the score.

The Stars went to work in earnest after that and with Sid Luckman clicking repeatedly with passes to John Siegal and George Wilson, moved the ball to the Washington 3 from which point John Petty plunged over.

* * *

The game was tied at 14 14 when Artoe connected for his winning field goal.

Receipts, all of which went to the United Seamen's Service fund, were announced as $75,000.

Baldinger Wins Rifle Club Match

J Baldinger won the 30-yard, three-shot, offhand matches of the Mansfield Muzzle Loader Rifle club Saturday with a percentage of 533 with L Church second at 388, and E Adams third at 333.

* * *

G. Lantz took the string measure match with 501 inches for three shots. A. Wagner was second and C. Hassinger third. Two one-shot offhand matches went to Hassinger and Church.

* * *

T Nelson won the 50-yard rest match with a 170 inch group measure across, while Lantz was second and Adams third.

The Navy cup, presented by Lt. Corwin, now in service, goes to George Lantz for the next quarter with eight firsts

Hornets Tied, But Retain First Place

INDIANAPOLIS — (U.P.) — The Pittsburgh Hornets registered only a 1 1 tie with the western division's third-place caps here Sunday night but maintained their hold on first place in the American hockey league

Douglas put Indianapolis ahead at 19.34 of the second period but Kelly sent the game into overtime by tallying for Pittsburgh at 8 33 of the third

The Bisons moved to within a single point of Pittsburgh by defeating the Cleveland Barons, 4-2, at Buffalo. The Bisons tallied once in the opening period and clinched the game with three goals in the second period, two by Kaminsky and one by Chapman.

The Hershey Bears scored a pair of goals in each period to win over the Eagles at New Haven 6 3. The victory maintained the Bears' three-point margin in the eastern division. Sorrell and Sullivan each chalked up two goals for the Bears.

The Reds scored once in each of the first two periods and then slammed home five goals in the third to whip the Washington Lions, 7 3, at Providence.

Late Baseball Opening Date Plan Given Consideration

By JACK MAHON

NEW YORK—(INS)—Baseball's badly bewildered executives, wandering aimlessly through muddled plans for the past week as they tried to figure out how to assemble their 1943 squads—and where to train them—had a somewhat brighter chance of getting out of the forest of confusion today.

* * *

It was a plan submitted for their consideration by Ed Barrow, head of the New York Yankees, whereby the opening date of the season be set back till April 27. Delaying the start of the campaign for approximately 12 days would enable almost all the teams to conduct their spring training schedules in their own ballparks, according to Cousin Ed, eliminating the necessity for long and costly train trips on already jammed railroads.

This is the first sensible suggestion by a baseball executive since ODT Director Joe Eastman recently threw them into a panic with a simple request to alter spring training schedules as much as possible to ease the burden on the transportation facilities now clogged with war need.

Deacon Branch Rickey of the Dodgers interpreted this as a plea to suspend the Florida training season and announced, with appropriate fanfare, Brooklyn would switch its training site nearer home to a spot still to be selected in North Carolina

Since each squad has to be assembled from all parts of the country and it is not quite clear what the difference would be, to transportation, to have the players converge on North Carolina rather than Florida, Rickey's action immediately caused nation-wide repercussions.

Baseball men are sheep-like. They follow any big name member of their group who comes up with a plan or decision in the midst of a crisis over any matter of even average importance. If the color of the scorecards came up for discussion it might be talked of for weeks till a veteran executive took matters in his own hands and made a decision. Within a week a similar plan would be in effect throughout the league; baseball policy has been just such a follow-the- leader process for years.

That's why Barrow's plan may meet with success. Ed points out, in a letter to President Will Harridge of the American League over the week-end, that the weather in April here is suitable for spring training He disclosed the Yankees have exhibition games booked for April 7th and 8th.

"If the season was moved back, to open on the 27th instead of around the 15th as usual, I think all teams could train at their home parks and have exhibition games with the teams in or near the same city.

"This would eliminate a lot of traveling, which is what the government wants to do," explained Barrow, "and give the teams four weeks to train, which I think is sufficient."

Barrow will probably find a Harridge with a receptive ear as the A. L. went on record at the recent major league meetings in Chicago as favoring a later opening. The National league didn't think much of the idea at that time.

As that was before all this confusion about abandoning the Florida training camps came up, club owners might be more agreeable to such a ride now. Barrow has suggested Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis and league presidents, Harridge and Ford Frick meet early next month to make a decision on his plan.

MATCHES POSTPONED

NEW ORLEANS, La. —(INS)— Second round play in the Sugar Bowl tennis tournament was scheduled for today following postponement of all matches yesterday.

KEEPS JOB

PHILADELPHIA —(U.P.)— President Gerald P. Nugent of the Philadelphia Phils announced today that Hans Lobert would manage the club again next year.

Baugh Fails To Show Up

Investigation Ordered By Elmer Layden.

By TED MEIER

PHILADELPHIA — (AP) — The failure of Sammy Baugh, star of the champion Washington Redskins, to appear for yesterday's pro bowl football classic at Shibe park caused a furore that overshadowed the National league All-Stars' 17 to 14 victory over the league champions.

* * *

Commissioner Elmer Layden ordered an investigation to bring out the "full facts." Another league official explained: "From all we know Baugh might have had a legitimate excuse for not showing up. But so far we can find no legitimate reason for his not notifying us that he could not or was not coming."

* * *

Baugh declared at his Rotan, Tex ranch home that "I tried my best to make the game. They were supposed to have a car ready for me in Sweetwater (about 30 miles from Rotan) so I could catch a plane out of Dallas about 11:50 p. m. Saturday night. The car was not there."

All proceeds of the game, above minimum expenses, were turned over to the United Seamen's Service The players were not paid and many of Baugh's Washington teammates were reported sore" at his failure to appear.

The game itself gave the Chicago bears some measure of revenge for losing the league title to the Redskins two weeks ago. Lee Artoe, Bear tackle, provided the winning three points by kicking a 43-yard field goal on the second play of the last quarter. Artoe's mighty boot climaxed a furious six-minute period in which 24 of the 31 points were scored

It was the first victory for the All-Stars since the Pro Bowl series began in 1938.

* * *

The gross gate was announced as $75,000. In addition $90,170 in war bonds was sold between the halves. Attendance totaled 18,671.

College Stars Get Pep Talk

East Seeks First Win Since 1937 Contest.

SAN FRANCISCO—(INS)—"The East has to win this one, Boys."

That was the order which Andy Kerr and Dr. George Hauser, co-coaches of the East Shrine football team, passed on their squad today.

Not since 1927 has the East won an East-West Shrine game, which comes back to its home grounds at Kezar stadium in San Francisco Jan. 1 after being played away from home for the first time last New Year day.

Ken Sandback, Princeton halfback, gave the East its 1937 victory when he booted a field goal from the eight yard stripe for the only points registered in the game.

In 1938 the teams fought to a scoreless tie and since then the West has won 14 to 0, 28 to 11, and 20 to 14, until last year when the teams tied in the rain and mud at New Orleans, 6-6.

Kerr and Hauser was banking this time on such big name stars as Les Horvath, Paul Governali, Harry Wright, Dick Wildung, Whitey Wistert, Sam Sebasteanski and Steve Filipowicz, to mention just a few.

The West's co-coaches, Babe Hollingbery and Don Faurot, also have their share of all-Americans who don't concede a thing to the East.

Whatever the outcome, one thing is certain. A crowd of 60,000 will once again see an all-star game and at the same time have the privilege of aiding crippled children in the Shriner's hospital for whose benefit the game is played.

Doesn't Care For Home Training

PHILADELPHIA—(INS)—Jimmy Wilson, manager of the Chicago Cubs, turned thumbs down today on a proposal to train his team at Wrigley Field.

"We are cooperating 100 per cent with Eastman (Joseph B. Eastman, ODT director) and will pitch our camp within a day coach ride of Chicago, but I think it a big mistake to try to train at home," Jimmy said.

Wilson, at his Philadelphia home, explained that he wanted to take his players someplace where they could "work up a sweat without the danger of catching cold," and declared that the trip puts the players in a better frame of mind.

Sport Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

NEW YORK — (AP) — The more we read about baseball's confused efforts to concoct a sensible spring training program, the more we suspect that the club owners are afraid of being hit where it hurts the most—in the bankroll. . . Our guess is both leagues will okay camps in the mid-south and if they do postpone the opening, they'll eventually decide that it's patriotic to end the season early, too—about the time the late-season attendance slump shows up.

ERSATZ BALL

From the Jacksonville, Fla., Naval Air station comes the sad story of sailor and marine teams that spent three weeks practicing for the basketball season without having a basket at either end of the court. . . . Priorities kept them from securing the iron rings and the supports for the backboards until just before the opening game.

MONDAY MATINEE

The Atlanta and Birmingham quarterback clubs both voted for Monk Gafford of Auburn, who looked so good in Saturday's Blue-Gray game, as the Southeastern conference's outstanding football player instead of Georgia's Frank Sinkwich.

XMAS JEER

For several years Ray Dumont, president and official "gag man" of the National Semi-pro Baseball congress, invited Sports Editor Clyde McBride of the Kansas City Star to be his guest at the opening of the national tournament at Wichita, Kas. . . and each year McBride failed to attend. . . . So when Dumont recently sent McBride his 1943 pass, he enclosed a note that he was sending a Christmas gift that would remind Clyde to be in Wichita next August. A few days later it arrived—a beautifully wrapped Christmas box containing a bottle of 'pop and a sack of peanuts.

Spirits Rise For Rose Bowl

UCLA and Georgia Both Given Inspiration.

PASADENA, Cal. — (U.P.) — The Rose Bowl picture today, just four days before the referee's whistle opens the New Year day gridiron classic, found the rival Georgia and UCLA camps displaying highest spirits yet shown in pre-game workouts, but for widely variant reasons.

The Uclans just feel good. Despite an unusually heavy practice session Saturday, the Bruins asked Coach Babe Horrell for a workout Sunday. When he said no, the Bruin squad voluntarily went on a five-mile hike.

* * *

The Bulldogs are happier because All-America Frankie Sinkwich donned sweat clothes yesterday and jogged around the practice field until his twisted right ankle forced a halt. The Georgia sensation has either been in bed or confined to his hotel room since he sprained the ankle in practice early last week.

Although Sinkwich limped noticeably yesterday, both Coach Wally Butts and Head Trainer Doc Jones assured the skeptical he would be ready to don his uniform New Year day.

Once they saw Sinkwich back on the field, the Bulldogs went through their most spirited workout yesterday since they arrived here a week ago.

It appeared more than likely that sophomore Charley Trippi will have to take over much of the burden usually carried by Sinkwich, whose ankle undoubtedly will prove a handicap Trippi was one of the chief reasons why the Bulldogs defeated Georgia Tech and thereby were invited west for the Rose Bowl.

In the other camp, a knee injury suffered over the week-end by UCLA's 200-pound first string center, Bill Armstrong, was reported satisfactory. Coach Horrell said he would definitely start the big pivot man.

* * *

Both teams have intensive drills scheduled today. The Bulldogs plan to work again on pass offense, while the Bruins will probably continue plotting their previously announced two-way system to stop Georgia, with Sinkwich and without Sinkwich.

Cage Tourney Considered

School Officials Meet In Columbus Wednesday.

COLUMBUS—(U.P.)— Indications mounted today that transportation difficulties would be the major factor for selection of Columbus as the site for Ohio's State scholastic basketball tournament in 1943.

School officials who will attend the state scholastic athletic association meeting at Columbus Wednesday to decide the fate of high school basketball in 1943 indicated that Columbus with its central location in the state would solve most of the tournament and transportation problems.

Commissioner H. R. Townsend said that travel restrictions and gasoline rationing would be considered by the board in determining possible sites and whether the state "A" and "B" tournaments are to be continued.

He indicated also that there would be a return to the old plan of having all 16 qualifiers meet at the tournament. Last year's plan had only four teams qualifying for the class "A" title.

Last season the 16-team "B" finals were held at Springfield. Somerset won the title. The four-team "A" finals were held at Kent with Xenia Central the victor. Both teams have been defeated this year.

Six Ohio Quintets Unbeaten

Toledo Dropped From List By DePaul Cagers.

By GRANT DILLMAN

(United Press Sports Writer)

COLUMBUS — Ohio's holiday basketball parade entered its second week today with only six teams remaining in the unbeaten class.

* * *

Toledo, previously undefeated in five starts, was dropped from the select list Saturday night by a husky DePaul quintet which left the floor on the long end of a 49-40 score.

Only nine games are scheduled next week, marking the final lull before the storm the following week when the season gets underway in earnest with 28 contests.

Only one of the state's undefeated quintets will put its record on the block this week. Bowling Green's high-flying Falcons will be idle for the first week since the season opened and Mt. Union, Ohio Northern, Capital and Otterbein also will rest. Case, winner of one game, meets Ohio Wesleyan.

Ohio State, with a record of one victory and one defeat, returns to the wars this week with an invasion of Rochester, Pittsburgh and University of Kentucky on Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday, respectively.

The Buckeyes opened the season with a decisive 41-29 triumph over Ohio Wesleyan and then dropped their second game to Great Lakes, 49-46. Since then, the Bucks have lost the services of Dante Lavelli, sophomore guard, and Bob Shaw, towering center.

Both will be ineligible for the rest of the season for failing to meet scholastic requirements. Shaw was leading the Buckeyes in scoring this season. He made 19 points against Ohio Wesleyan and 20 in the Great Lakes game.

In other games this week Ohio University seeks revenge against Cincinnati for a 51-37 drubbing administered by the Queen City team when the two met Dec. 19. The game will be played at Cincinnati Saturday.

Toledo's Rockets will attempt to erase the sting of Saturday's defeat by DePaul when they meet Purdue on their home court Friday in the only game scheduled that day.

Saturday also will see Fenn paired against the Alumni, Oberlin playing Camp Perry, Ohio Wesleyan at Case and Western Reserve taking on Wyoming.

Oberlin has won one game and lost one while Camp Perry has a record of one victory against three defeats. Case, in its only game of the season, defeated Carnegie Tech 52-50. Wesleyan has won two and lost three games. Western Reserve has won three games and lost one.

Bowling Green will pause temporarily with a record of eight consecutive triumphs, the latest at the expense of Heidelberg, 62-41. Wyndol Gray, freely mentioned as a possible successor to Bob Gerber who holds the state's high-scoring record, made 32 points in the contest.

Youngstown made it two losses in a row last week, bowing to Muskingum, 45-38. The victory gave Muskingum a record of two victories and two defeats, Youngstown had won four games before being defeated by Toledo Dec. 19.

Akron, which defeated Heidelberg 48-39 last week, has won four contests and lost two. Heidelberg's double loss to Akron and Bowling Green leaves it with a record of two victories and three defeats.

Launch Final Week Of Practice

MIAMI, Fla. —(INS)— The University of Alabama's Crimson Tide and Boston college's Eagles, opponents in the Orange Bowl New Year day, today launched their final week of preparation for the post-season classic.

Both Coach Frank Thomas, of Alabama, and Coach Denny Myers, of Boston college, indicated they would hold rough scrimmages to an absolute minimum prior to the game Friday to avoid practice injuries.

NAZIS GETTING 'OLD' FAST

LOS ANGELES — (U.P.) — Dr. Jan O. M. Broek, lecturer on the campus of the University of California, says Nazi instructors hold that the four stages in the life cycle of nations are youth, adolescence, maturity and old age, characterized as follows: "If you grab, you are adolescent; when you stop, you are mature; when you can't grab any more, you are old."

Books For Children

(Available at Mansfield Public Library)

Two stories dealing with a small Chinese boy and the friendship of two little girls are the new books at the public library on the reading list for young children.

THE QUESTIONS OF LIFU, by Eleanor Frances Lattimore—Once more this author has written a delightful Chinese story for the younger readers of novels. Lifu is seven years old and is continually asking "when is father coming home." The war seems too long. At last Lifu starts out in search of his father but he finds instead a little girl refugee who is taken into his own home.

SUSAN'S SAFE HARBOR, by Katherine W. Eyre—Susan's father was an artist and when his luck was bad for a time he took Susan and her mother to live on Fisherman's Wharf in San Francisco. There Susan met Franchesca whose father is a fisherman and their friendship began. The child who chooses this book to read will enjoy the friendship and will find at least two new friends for himself.

Tech Still Rules Slight Favorite

DALLAS —(AP)— Betting odds narrowed today on the outcome of the seventh annual Cotton Bowl game with arrival of both participating teams — Georgia Tech and Texas.

Tech remained a slight favorite. Along betting row they quoted 6 and 7 and that's close as any of the bowl battles of the past.

Word came, when the Georgia Tech team pulled into town, that Ralph Plaster, regular fullback, might not be able to play because of a knee injury and that Clint Castleberry, the sensational freshman star, would be performing with his knee in a brace.

* * *

Not an injury hampered the Texas squad, strengthened through addition of several fine freshman prospects. This is being done since the Southwest conference voted to make first-year men immediately eligible.

First practice sessions were scheduled this afternoon.

SOLDIER HAS 52 OPERATIONS

DENVER —(AP)— Army doctors told Pvt. Notre Riddick, 22, he "must be kidding" when he said he had been operated upon 52 times in one year. Riddick whipped off his shirt and showed the scars, some of them two inches long.

All the operations were performed when he was between three and four years old, to cure a blood disease.

SCRAP SUPPLY HOLDS UP FOR STEEL MILLS

Fractionally Higher Price Range Discovered In Market Trading.

NEW YORK—Fractionally higher prices predominated in today's early stock market transactions.

At a fairly active opening gainers included Bethlehem, Chrysler, United Fruit, Standard Oil of Ind., International Nickel, U. S. Steel, General Tire and Boeing.

Analysis of share trends noted the survey of the magazine "Steel" which said "scrap supply in general is considered sufficient to reach well into the winter as melters have fair reserves in most cases" with many yards accumulating supplies which they have been unable to prepare under weather and labor conditions.

Final days of the year, the review added, see no remission in production activity.

FRENCH LEADERS IN CONFERENCE

Giraud and De Gaulle Pledge Mutual Willingness To Cooperate in War.

Darlan's assassination by a young French citizen and the election of Giraud to take the former Vichy vice premier's place.

De Gaulle spent most of the week-end conferring with his Fighting French national committee on the question of effecting unity among all French patriot forces in Africa and elsewhere in the French empire.

This would mean the inclusion of French leaders in Africa, Madagascar, Syria, the Caribbean, South America and the south Pacific in a unified French empire organization.

It was made known yesterday that a British mission had visited Djibouti, capital of French Somaliland on the East African coast on the question of the adhesion of Somaliland to the Allied Cause.

There were indications that full adhesion of French Somaliland to the Allies might be announced soon.

Enthusiastic British newspaper reception of the election of Gen. Giraud showed the changed feeling here where there had always been one of open suspicion of Darlan.

CLEVELAND GETS HORSE MEAT

22,000 Pound Shipment Arrives, To Sell at 35 Cents.

CLEVELAND—(U.P.)—Cleveland received 22,000 pounds—representing 30 horses—of horsemeat today, its first shipment. The meat, cut in quarters, was imported by the U. S. Packing company and was stored in the company's refrigerators at the Northern Ohio Food terminal.

The meat was inspected and approved by the government and described just as good as beef and "just as tender as butter."

Some of the meat has been sold to retailers, but not delivered. It was expected to sell at about 35 cents per pound, a little less than beef.

BATTERS JAIL BARS, ESCAPES

Youthful Prisoner Made Break Last Saturday, Sheriff Belatedly Reveals.

age size would not be able to crowl through the opening.

Wymer, whose address was listed as 607 Fairfax avenue, was wearing dark trousers and a jacket of wool material and leather combination when he escaped, Sheriff Robinson said.

He went to the home of Shuster, who said he knew Wymer was under bond but denied that he knew of the escape from jail. He took him to the farm of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Patrick, near Sparta, where Wymer was formerly employed, he told officers.

The Patricks told Robinson that Wymer had been there, and had even told them of his jail break and promised to return voluntarily to give himself up when they reprimanded him and refused to harbor him in their home.

Wymer had been in jail since Sept. 18 when he was taken into custody by Mansfield police in connection with a series of tire thefts. Bound over under $4,000 bond, he was awaiting grand jury consideration of his case after they convene Jan. 5. He had been in trouble several times previously, officers said, having served in Lancaster for thievery.

Sheriff's officers said they had no record of when, if ever, a successful jail break had been made prior to Saturday. At least two have been attempted during the past decade, they said, the last being in 1935 when Dorothy Thibodeau, of New York, was sentenced and served a three year term at Marysville after she attempted to pass a hack saw in a loaf of bread to her sweetheart, Harold Knowlton, who with Lawrence Race, both of New York, were later sentenced for attempted robbery of the Bellville bank.

TIGHTEN UP ON LIMITED BUYING

ager of Linton's grocery, said, "We haven't limited purchases so far," but added, "we'll begin the minute we have a run." Another dealer, Mary B. Underwood, manager of the Underwood grocery, said, "We're limiting customers to one can when it comes to the hard-to-get foods and we'll hold them down if they start a run."

Retailers generally indicated they tried to meet the demands of their regular customers in supplying them with amounts sufficient for the size of their families and that they also attempted to help farmers and other folks having to use tires and gasoline to drive a considerable distance for their canned goods.

Meanwhile, mail concerning new and changed orders of the ration organization was the heaviest this morning for any day in recent weeks with the total almost as great as a normal week's receipts.

Perhaps of widest interest was the announcement that the registration date for war ration book one had been extended to Jan. 15. It is necessary for consumers to have this book before they are eligible for further ration coupons.

Mansfield fuel oil consumers who signed for a three months period must re-register at the ration board headquarters beginning tomorrow and extending through Wednesday and Thursday.

Each person who registers must present his record of delivery stub with his application, ration officials warned. Rural consumers will be registered soon, although places of registration have not yet been set.

Sugar and coffee rationing regulations were made to coincide in the matter of surrendering ration book one to the restaurant, boarding house or similar eating place where a person arranges to eat 14 or more meals a week.

Ceiling prices were announced today on women's silk hose with 69 cents per pair set as the price for the coarsest first quality circular knit hosiery to $1.65 for the finest quality full fashioned kind. For the most commonly worn styles of first quality hose of three and four thread, 42 to 48 gauge full fashioned, retail ceilings of $1 to $1.25 were fixed.

The ration board will remain open New Year Day with a skeleton staff in charge.

'Teen-Agers Will Fill Half Of '43 Draft Contingents

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Half of the more than 3,500,000 men joining the nation's fighting forces in 1943 will come from the 18 and 19-year-old groups.

Draft officials estimate some 250,000 to 300,000 men will be inducted monthly. Of these, 1,750,000 will be of the 'teen-age class. The rest will come mainly from childless married men 20 to 37 years old.

Selective service authorities pointed out the pool of single men within the 20-37 age group, who are available for military service, has virtually been exhausted.

By the end of 1943, the armed services planned strength of 9,700,000 men in the ranks must come from about 21,000,000 in the 18-37 age bracket. Already, most of the 6,100,000 men now in uniform have come from that age classification.

Organic substances are being developed to replace copper and lead in fungicides for spraying orchards.

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

Miss Midnight's Diary.

Manhattan Glitter: Jane Pickens, at the Cotillion Room, singing a melody of love songs dedicated to her Navy fellah — Lt. Eddy Duchin, at the nearest ringside table . . . At the Cafe Louis XIV, Geraldine Farrar checking a portable typewriter between Red Cross duties . . . Madeleine Carroll dining in the Cub Room, looking like a beauuoo - oo-tiful refugee in a babushka . . . Marlene Dietrich and Jean Gabin holding hands at the Latin Quarter . . . Dwight Fiske fixing a moody glance on the holly wreath above the bar at Le Coq Rouge —dreaming of a Dwight Christmas? . . . Famous Four at the Famous Door — Milton Berle, his Cigar, his Mom and his Missus.

Kilgallen

A Stone's Throw From Broadway: Fanny Ward, perennially referred to as the perennial flapper, wowed the customers at Armando's by getting up and singing three songs, without the aid of the microphone . . . Mayor La-Guardia could be seen taking his two children to the Criterion to see Abbott and Costello in "Who Done Is?" . . . A sign has gone up in Theodore's elegant restaurant reading: "Please don't ask for a large coffee. Demi-tasse only. War is Hell." . . . Incongruity of the week was Jimmy Durante lunching at the Colony, playing host to a half dozen Army majors and colonels, who laughed so hard at Jimmy's patter they could scarcely eat a thing.

Fable From the Fifties: I lunched with Rita Hayworth just before she returned to the coast, and Col. Darryl Zannuck, back from the African war front, sat with us for a while to make a short report on his adventures. He looked fit but much thinner than usual, and completely sobered by what he has seen.

"There's a lot of blood over there," is the way he puts it.

"I was in Tunisia, riding in a tank 8, 10, 12 hours a day, getting the daylights shaken out of me, having my eardrums shattered by the noise, seeing terrible sights. Yesterday I went to a party in Washington. There was more champagne than you could drink, buckets of caviar, everything in the world to eat."

He shook his head.

"It's hard for me to realize that a week ago I was eating rations out of a can."

Col. Zanuck said that in spite of the hardships and fierce danger, the morale of the American troops in Africa is superb.

"They're glad to be doing something to get it over," he smiled. "I'll bet there's 99 per cent less beefing over there than in the Army camps here at home."

As he rose to leave, Zanuch patted Rita's green-gloved hand.

"Baby," he said, "what those boys in Tunisia wouldn't give for a look at you!"

The Owl Patrol: At the Stork the other night, Gary Cooper noted a sign reading: "$5.00 Fine for Table-hopping." He sent the card over to Guy Kibbee with a little note saying: "I'd like to come over to see you, but it's cheaper to phone." (Incidentally, girls, Gary whistles while he dances, no kidding) . . .

All Around the Town: There's talk that Robert Sherwood may resign from the OWI Overseas Branch. The OWI is undergoing a big reorganization . . . Ada May, the former Ziegfeld star, is ready to step out of retirement. She may open at A. C. Blumenthal's new Mexico City nitery . . . Monte Proser is now strong enough to undergo another major operation. A new kind of Scotch story was enacted at Jack Dempsey's Broadway Restaurant the other night. Ella Logan, the Glasgow Glamour Girl, and Ross MacLean, the Scotch baritone, argued loud and long about a check. They both wanted to PAY it as a surprise to a soldier lad in kilts who was dining alone.

HOLLYWOOD

—By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD — This is very irreverent of me, I'm afraid, but I don't believe there's a Jennifer Jones. I'm a confirmed believer in the cult of Alexis Smith, and someday I may rise to the heights where I can accept a Chrysanthemum Brown if offered, but right now Jennifer Jones, well . . .

Coons

What makes it doubly difficult about Jennifer believing there is one, is that she's the lucky girl who's playing "The Song of Bernadette."

It's a religious picture, as a few hundred thousand people who have read Franz Werfel's best-seller already know, and it seems that girls who star in religious pictures just suddenly materialize. They come from the holy nowhere into the uncertain here, and they haven't lived before. They have no past. They have only a glowing, sanctified present.

This seems to be part of an unwritten code of Hollywood. Religious subjects are ticklish business, you know. Tread lightly. Hush, hush!

But don't blame Jennifer, and don't blame the press agent who assured me seriously that Jennifer's marriage is "off the record." Just lay it to the unwritten law of Hollywood, and the powers that be here who in spare moments erase recorded marriages from the public record.

As a skeptic about Jennifer, I may report that Phyllis Isley from Tulsa, Okla., is a pretty, healthy-looking girl with a broad smile and a great deal of vivacity who is almost as excited about getting the part as she would be if she had verily witnessed a miracle.

Phyllis is the daughter of a movie exhibitor. Several years ago she came to Hollywood because she wanted to be an actress. She played in a western or two at Republic. She went to New York to study, and there she met David O. Selznick, who signed her, put her to acting, dancing and diction lessons. On the coast she created quite a hit in a play at Santa Barbara, backed by Selznick, but nothing more was heard of her until her selection as Bernadette, the peasant girl who made Lourdes a shrine.

Phyllis is married — "off the record," of course — to a young Metro stock actor, and she seems quite happy about it except when she must erase the fact. Other concessions to saintliness: she's giving up finger-nail polish and lipstick for the "duration."

Chatter Corner

Mrs. John Jones leaving for Indianapolis to visit her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Morrow, for 10 days . . . Mr. and Mrs. William J. Frasz of Cleveland calling on Mansfield friends while visiting Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Grabler and Miss Marian Marshall . . . Diana Hale, Mansfield movie starlet, sending holiday greetings to local friends from Hollywood.

The Ray Calens helping furnish fun at holiday parties by mixing their recording machine and discs with them . . . Walter Simon rushing around town seeing friends while here from Cleveland . . . Teresa Peiffer delighting friends with her colorful Christmas cards.

A few motorists protesting to gasoline station attendants against display of "C" or "B" stickers and allegedly going elsewhere for their gasoline rations, where such compliance is supposed not to have been requested . . . Relatives of Emerson Pace hearing from him for the first time in nine weeks to learn he is now a technical sergeant and stationed in Africa. He is the son of Hollis Pace, plumber, and husband of Faye Culler Pace, Westinghouse.

Several former "volunteer" workers preparing to try out for a permanent place on the ration board staff . . . Mr. and Mrs. Roy Metz, Clifton boulevard, receiving word that their son has arrived at the U. S. naval hospital at Pearl Harbor. He is a third class petty officer attached to a medical unit.

Mrs. Edyth MacDonald returning to her home in Columbus today after visiting since Christmas Eve at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Davis, 82 Glenwood boulevard. She audits county payrolls for the state of Ohio.

CHECK HAIR AND PAINT IN OHIO RAPE KILLING

Police Analyze Evidence as Suspect Insists He's Innocent of Crime.

(By Associated Press)

CINCINNATI — Wisps of hair clutched in the hands of 10-year-old Helen Sellers and aluminum paint smears on her body underwent analyses today in police efforts to "break" a 57-year-old ex-convict's repeated denials that he raped and beat the child and left her to die under a warehouse on the night before Christmas.

"You've got the wrong man—I didn't do it," the slightly-built suspect said again and again during hours of grilling after the blond, epileptic child's torn body was discovered.

But acting Detective Chief Patrick Hayes insisted: "We've got the right man" and emphasized flaws found in the suspect's story, including admission after an original denial that he gave Helen a nickel in a west-end cafe Christmas eve. There were "fresh scratch marks" on the suspect's face and neck, Hayes added.

Federal Bureau of Investigation agents and City Chemist Otto Behrer were to report today on analyses on aluminum spots found on the suspect's trousers with other spots detectives believe were blood.

The suspect is employed as a paint sprayer. Thrice divorced, he lived alone in two rooms.

His record showed a six-year term in Ohio penitentiary for molestation in 1932 of his 13-year-old sister-in-law and a year's imprisonment in Hamilton county jail after a six-year-old girl was found in his company near a circus grounds two years ago.

Lieut. Harry Tobergte said the child went to a west-end cafe Christmas eve with her father, Roscoe Sellers, a structural iron worker, and her mother.

Lieut. Stanley Schrotel said two women reported seeing Helen with the suspect in the cafe and later seeing the child alone at another cafe where she told them she was "with a guy and having a good time."

Coroner Frank Coppock said the girl probably died early Saturday from the effects of rape, beating and exposure.

MARINES QUELL VALLEJO RIOT

Two Negro Sailors Shot In Race Disturbances, Troops Sent To Stations.

(By International News Service)

VALLEJO, Cal.—Order was restored to Vallejo today after rioting in which two Negro sailors were shot.

The two men shot were identified as Leo Arthur Shaw, 18, wounded in the left arm, and George Carpenter, 26, wounded in the left leg, both navy cooks second class.

The rioting broke out again last night after being quelled Saturday night. The new outburst caused issuance of orders declaring the city virtually a "forbidden zone."

All soldiers, sailors and marines, white or colored, except those on patrol duty, were ordered to return to their stations immediately or face military arrest.

Big trucks from the Mare Island navy yard rolled through the streets last night picking up men on liberty and returning them to their posts.

United States marines, wearing their war helmets and carrying sub-machine guns, patrolled the sidewalks, theaters and taverns, ordering men back to their stations.

The marines quelled the renewed fighting last night. The street fighting flared anew when Negro sailors were given liberty for the evening.

Police reported they moved almost en masse on the waterfront section of Vallejo. All available policemen were sent immediately to the scene to help military police and shore patrols block any recurrence of the fighting which broke out Saturday night when racial feeling, which had been developing in Vallejo for several weeks, reached the rioting stage.

DR. HARRO WOLTMANN, PHYSICIAN 35 YEARS, TAKEN BY DEATH AT 60

Dr. Harro Woltmann, 60, Mansfield physician for 35 years and former chief of staff at General hospital, died Sunday night at his home at 38 Glenwood boulevard. He had been in failing health for several years but retained his status as a practicing physician until his death.

Dr. Woltmann was widely known as a diagnostician and it was through his efforts that a chest clinic was established last year for high school pupils in Mansfield.

With a clinic already set up for younger children, Dr. Woltmann believed that it would be advisable to establish one for pupils in the 11th grade so that if lung defects were revealed, the pupils could be treated in the winal year of school.

Funds contributed by a benefactor were used to purchase portable x-ray equipment which was taken to the high school for the first time last winter. The program was set up for a five-year period.

Native of Chicago, Dr. Woltmann was educated at the University of Michigan. He received a scholarship in the Rockefeller foundation in 1904 and served his internship at Lakeside hospital in Cleveland. He was a fellow in the American College of Physicians and Surgeons.

Coming to Mansfield 35 years ago from Hillsdale, Mich., he later was chief of the General hospital staff for four years. He was a charter member of the Mansfield Rotary club and a member of the Central Methodist church.

In 1907 he married Maude Vaughn who survives with two daughters, Mrs. A. T. Strickler, and Mrs. E. H. Jeddiff, both of Mansfield.

The body was removed to the Jones Memorial where friends will be received after 3 p. m. Tuesday.

Private services will be conducted at the funeral home Wednesday morning. The body will be taken to Cleveland for cremation. Rev. R. L. Foulke, pastor of Central Methodist church, will officiate at the services.

"Look, Joe—legs!"

Pay raise petitions filed some weeks ago with council by police, firemen and other city department employes today appear doomed to consideration next February or March or April, if any. There was no indication in City Hall today that council would meet in special session before Jan. 1 at which time all monies revert to the general fund and existing accounts are abolished. According to City Auditor Paul L. Kelley council hardly can or will recreate the accounts before February, and probably March and it is assumed that some time will be required for final action on any increases. Beginners in the police and fire departments are the lowest paid of all municipal employes, their rate being $120 a month. The city will enter the new year with considerably more than $200,000 cash on hand.

"Miami is no place to be unless you are a soldier," T. M. Sammons, Mansfielder on a health sojourn there writes back to former associates on the gasoline panel, along with the announcement that his homeward reservations are booked for Jan. 5. "They are training, drilling and driving trucks all over the beach, service men have taken over all the best hotels and lights are out every night which makes the place very unlike the spot we once knew. The soldiers not only deserve but get the best here," he concluded.

Although there's one more holiday to celebrate before public routine gets back to normal the Mansfield Public Library staff expects circulation to start climbing again this week after taking a nose-dive the early part of the month, particularly during Christmas week. The daily circulation last week averaged about 200 while on normal days and particularly on Saturday it hovers between 500 and 600. Circulation for last December reached 9,966 and it has a couple of thousand to go before reaching that figure for the corresponding period this year.

WOODEN CARS SMASHED IN CANADA CRASH

8 Others Hurt as Landslide Derails Special Train In Oregon.

(By Associated Press)

ALMONTE, Ont.—Twenty-eight holiday passengers were killed and 19 injured, many critically, when the locomotive of a Canadian Pacific troop train plowed through the three wooden cars of a local train standing in the station here last night, officials of the railway said today.

A corrected casualty list was released by the railway after earlier reports had listed total of 232 casualties, including 32 dead.

Virtually all the dead and injured in the three coaches which were taking aboard men, women and children at Almonte on the run from Pembroke, Ont., to Ottawa.

The troop train was only slightly damaged. It was moving from the Petawawa military camp.

Throughout the night, in the flickering light of a bonfire built from the wreckage of the smashed cars, rescue workers toiled to release trapped passengers and remove the dead.

Scattered in the deep snow were reminders of the recent holiday festivities, torn bundles in the brilliant color of Christmas wrappings.

Landslide Derails Train, Injuring 8

PORTLAND, Ore.—(INS)—Eight men lay injured today, one seriously, following a landslide which derailed eight cars in a 19-car special Southern Pacific train. Officials said many navy men were among the passengers.

The landslide roared down on the special train last night near Wicopee on the Southern Pacific's main line to California, near the summit of the Cascades, 180 miles south of Portland.

The landslide covered 150 feet of track and in some places was 10 feet deep. The engine and the first nine cars in the train passed the scene before the slide occurred.

Passengers in the derailed cars were transferred to the first nine not derailed and resumed their journey.

U. S. LAUNCHES DRIVE TO HALT 'RUN' ON FOODS

Appeals To Patriotism In Announcement of Point Rationing Plan.

fresh fruits and vegetables and home-canned and processed foods are exempt from the provisions of the new ration program.

Meanwhile, he will begin recruiting 1,500,000 volunteers to handle registration of consumers and to inform the public how the "points" ration system works.

Every member of the civilian population—from the new born infant to the most elderly person—will have exactly the same number of coupon points to spend during each ration period, expected to be about a month in duration. The periods will be announced in advance. Point values for various foods will be identical throughout the country and housewives will be able to shop in any store they elect to spend their coupons.

But housewives will have to budget their coupons, much as they do their money. Foods that are scarce will have higher point values.

This will be the 10th rationing program put into effect by OPA. Already rationed are coffee, sugar, automobiles, tires, gasoline, fuel oil, bicycles, typewriters and heavy duty, rubber footgear. In addition to meat rationing which is on the near horizon, officials expect soon to have to ration dairy products, especially butter and cheese.

The radio addresses of Wickard and Davis last night were designed to explain the necessity for this move—described by Henderson as "one of the largest efforts of the kind ever undertaken."

Highlights of Wickard's address:

The new program is expected to provide each person an average of 33 pounds of canned, dried or frozen foodstuffs a year—about 13 pounds less than the comparable yearly average between 1937-41, but enough to insure a "well balanced and healthful diet."

Supplies of other staples will be as great or greater than usual. In dairy products 90 or 95 per cent as much will be available for civilian use as in the 1935-39 period; 100 or 105 per cent as much meat; 150 to 160 per cent as much poultry; 90 to 95 per cent as many eggs; 95 to 100 per cent as many potatoes; 125 to 130 per cent as much fresh citrus fruits, 90 to 95 per cent as much fresh vegetables, and "abundant supplies" of cereals.

"Next year our armed forces and our fighting Allies will need about a quarter of all the food that we produce . . . for many of us here at home the battle of food offers our greatest opportunity to contribute most directly to winning the war. I am confident that you will make the most of this opportunity."

Highlights of Davis' address:

The interval between today's announcement and the date when the new rationing program goes into effect "gives chiselers and hoarders a chance to stock up, if they are so inclined—and if they can get away with it. But I am confident that the overwhelming majority of the American people are patriotic enough, and sensible enough, not to try to do that; for it would injure the workings of a system which seems . . . to be the best that can be devised."

Here's List of Foods To Be Rationed

WASHINGTON—(INS)—The following is a list of processed fruits and vegetables to be rationed under the new OPA order:

Canned and bottled fruits and fruit juices (including spiced fruits); apples, crabapples; applesauce; apricots; baby foods; berries, all varieties; cherries; cranberries and sauce; fruits for salad and fruit cocktail; grapefruit, grapefruit juice; grape juice; peaches; pears; pineapple; pineapple juice; all other canned and bottle fruits, fruit juices, and combinations.

Canned and bottled vegetables and vegetable juices: asparagus; baby foods; beans, fresh lima; green and wax, all canned and bottled dry varities, including baked beans, soaked dry beans, pork and beans, kidney beans and lentils; beets; carrots; corn, peas; sauerkraut; spinach; tomatoes; tomato catsup and chile sauce; tomato juice, and other tomato products.

All other canned and bottled vegetables, vegetable juices and combinations.

Other processed foods, canned soups, all types and varieties; dried, dehydrated fruits, prunes, raisins and all other types; frozen fruits, cherries, peaches, strawberries, other berries and all other frozen fruits; frozen vegetables, asparagus, lima beans, green and wax beans, all other frozen vegetables.

The following items are exempt from rationing:

Candied fruits, chile con carne; frozen fruits in containers of more than 10 pounds; frozen vegetables in containers of more than 10 pounds; fruit cakes; fruit juices in containers over one gallon; suet puddings; jams; jellies; meat stews containing some vegetables; olives; paste products, such as spaghetti, macaroni, noodles, whether or not they are packed with added vegetable sauces; pickles, potato salad; preserves; relishes, and vegetable juices in containers over one gallon.

SINK 8 MORE

Enemy Attacks Raise Allied Toll In Western Atlantic.

(By Associated Press)

Eight more United Nations cargo ships last week were announced sunk in western Atlantic enemy attacks.

The craft—three American, two British, one Panamanian and two unidentified Allied—were sunk off the United States, in the Caribbean or off South America. Fifty-two seamen were reported killed or missing in the sinkings.

through stiffening German defenses to positions roughly 35 miles from the Gulf of Hammamet on the Tunisian east coast, threatening to cut the Axis Tunisian front in two. The second column was near Kairouan, about 50 miles farther south and 35 miles west of Sousse.

It was not known whether these forces would continue to be under direct command of General Giraud since his designation as high commissioner of French Africa, to take the place of the assassinated Admiral Jean Darlan.

Allied ground forces continued to hold the important hill position six miles northeast of Medjez-El-Bab, which they won Christmas day in a fierce fight.

Along this battlefield, 28 miles from Tunis, the Germans were reported working with feverish haste to bolster their defenses, using huge tanks as pillboxes, stringing up wire, and strewing mines.

Russian dispatches said the jaws of the new trap in the Don bend was being closed by the capture of the villages of Biriukov and Solonetzky.

A Moscow communique said that in the drive down the lower Don, 600 Germans were slain in a night battle as the Red army forged steadily on.

In the middle Don offensive where the Russians are pressing westward into the Ukraine and southward toward Rostov, 600 more Germans were reported killed and an important Nazi stronghold was captured.

The offensive was reaching so deep into the German rear that crated planes were reported being found at rail line stations.

On the Velikie Luki front northwest of Moscow the Russians reported capturing four more communities.

The German high command acknowledged the pressure of Russian attacks along the entire front and said German troops fought "successful defensive battles" in the Don bend.

Report 66,000 Nazi Prisoners Taken

NEW YORK—(AP)—A Moscow broadcast recorded by the federal communications commission said today 66,000 German prisoners had been taken by the Russians in the middle Don sector alone during the past 10 days.

The invaders were said to have been dislodged from 800 inhabited localities in the same period.

"The more blows they get," the Moscow radio quoted, "the more they lie and the more they shout about their own successes."

Eisenhower Praises Morale of Doughboys

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA—(INS)—Digging silt trenches in quagmires of mud, the result of days of rain on the Tunisian battlefields, American Doughboys can still smile, Lieut. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower reported today.

Back from a visit to the front Eisenhower told how he watched a squad of mud-sodden Yanks digging trenches and joking at the same time. They argued over the type of trench best suited to protect troops from bombs or machine gun and cannon fire as they worked, he said.

"Their morale is absolutely fine," the commander said. "The appearance and endurance of the men is inspiring, and I want to pay high tribute to them."

Retreating Rommel Force Nears Misurata

LONDON—(AP)—Marshal Erwin Rommel's retreating African corps was rapidly approaching Misurata today and there it must decide either to make a stand or give up all Mussolini's Tripolitania and join the Axis forces in Tunisia where rains kept Allied and Axis armies at a standstill.

Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery reported in a Cairo communique that his British eighth army had engaged Rommel's rearguard in the region of Wadi Bel El Chebir, 40 miles west of Sirte and only about 15 miles east of Buerat El Hsun. The Libyan shore bends northward there toward Misurata and forms a huge hump in the coastline.

Flanking marshlands and hills in the immediate stretch ahead gave Marshal Rommel his most advantageous position to stop and fight since his defeated army pulled up stakes at El Aghelia, 220 miles east of Buerat El Hsun.

Allies Arm Giraud's African Army

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa—(Delayed)—(U.P.)—The United States is arming Gen. Henri Honore Giraud's French African army as rapidly as possible, Lieut. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Allied commander in chief, announced today.

Eisenhower said planes already had been delivered to Giraud's air force and tanks and more planes were on the way.

Giraud, newly elected French high commissioner to succeed Admiral Jean Francois Darlan, and commander in chief of the French land, sea and air forces, conferred with Eisenhower this morning at Allied headquarters and then conferred with members of the French imperial council.

It was believed here that, with the aid of the Allied supplies which already have begun to reach the French forces, Giraud would form an army that would become an important part of the Allied military machine.

Highway patrolmen said Benson told them he was unfamiliar with the road and that his car skidded on a gravel surface and plunged into a ditch.

Three persons were killed in week-end traffic accidents in the Cleveland area. Miss Blanche Krause, 19, Cleveland, died when the auto in which she was riding skidded off the road while the driver was being harassed by occupants of a following car.

Throughout the nation holiday highway mishaps were reduced greatly in number by tire and gasoline rationing, with only 255 lives lost in the four-day period as compared to 334 for the Dec. 26 period a year ago.

PREDICTS RISE

Reed Says OPA Must Increase Flour Price Soon.

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Senator Reed (R-Kas.) predicted today the office of price administration soon would find it necessary to increase the ceiling price on flour to avert a threatened bread shortage.

The Kansas senator declared that because of a price squeeze, 90 per cent of the nation's flour mills had quit taking orders three or four weeks ago. He pointed out wheat was selling at $1.22 a bushel in Kansas City when price ceilings were set on flour, but now brings about $1.31.

"Manifestly," Reed said, "a miller cannot pay $1.31 for wheat and sell his flour on the basis of $1.22 wheat."

No general price ceiling has been established for flour, but millers have been permitted to sell it at no more than the highest price they quoted between Sept. 28 and Oct. 2, 1942.

Urges Herbert Hoover As OPA Chief To Replace Henderson

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — Sen. Arthur Capper (R) Kan., today favored appointment of Herbert Hoover to replace Leon Henderson as head of the OPA and that he be given "full power to administer rationing and to handle price controls."

Sen. Prentiss M. Brown (D) Mich., who was defeated in the November election, is expected to replace the retiring Henderson.

Capper predicted in a radio address that the coming year will see more rationing "than any one would have dreamed possible even a few months ago," and severely criticized the government's price control and ration program.

The senator said he was "afraid" his recommendations would not be carried out, but Mr. Roosevelt "will appoint someone more or less committed to Mr. Henderson's program of setting up and trying to enforce retail price ceilings on thousands of items at literally hundreds of thousands of different prices."

Capper denied that mid-west congressmen were ever "out looking for Mr. Henderson's scalp," and said that what farm state members have been trying to get is:

"The substitution of a more sane and sensible program of price control and rationing than the cumbersome, complex, and I believe unworkable system devised by the smart young men under Mr. Henderson."

"It was what Mr. Henderson, under direction, was doing, that the farm state senators and congressmen objected to," he added.

"And I don't believe it is safe for anyone to assume that because Mr. Henderson is on his way out, that there will be less rationing in 1943."

Capper declared that fuel oil rationing is "another example of the futility of the present policies of controlling domestic affairs." He said that there was a surplus of petroleum and natural gas in the midwest yet their production and use was curtailed, necessitating bringing in coal from the west.

"We must get new production of petroleum, and get it soon, or the 'rubber situation' may be succeeded (or accompanied by) a 'petroleum situation' that will be even more serious," he added.

"The national war program must be shifted in direction to a production program all along the line. This must be done, although the time is getting late. I hope the Henderson resignation will start the changes which mean that it will be done."

TOJO INFORMS JAPS REAL WAR JUST STARTING

Warns United Nations Plan Important New Counter Blows.

taro Shimada advanced the claims of heavy Allied naval losses—obviously greatly exaggerated—asserting 1,100,000 tons of Allied warships have been sunk since the war began. He listed 11 battleships, 11 aircraft carriers, 46 cruisers, 48 destroyers, 93 submarines, and 54 other warships in this total, claimed 164 Allied warcraft—including nine battleships and four carriers—had been damaged, and 425 Allied merchant ships sunk and 503 captured.

And he added, in this account highly-colored for home-front consumption, that Japanese planes had destroyed 3,853 Allied planes.

The premier mentioned the Aleutians, Burma, the Solomons and New Guinea as probable sites of "counterattacks" by the United Nations.

Seven Jap Planes Smashed in Battle

WITH AMERICAN AIR FORCES, China, Dec. 26—(Delayed)—(UP)—Seven Japanese planes were destroyed today in a brief air battle over the rugged western Yunnan mountains as the enemy tried to retaliate for repeated raids on bases in Burma and Indo-China.

Even as the Japanese raiding force was being shot down in flames, American bombers again were over Lashio, important Japanese base in northern Burma, blowing up warehouses and wrecking the enemy airport.

Two American fighter planes were shot down in the mountain clash, near an advanced American base, but the pilot of one was known to be safe.

Allies Smashing Last Enemy Lines at Buna

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN AUSTRALIA—(AP)—Allied troops storming heavily-fortified, bunker-type defenses are smashing the last Japanese lines at Buna in New Guinea, the Allied command announced today in a communique which also disclosed the debut of American P-38 fighters on that front with a smashing victory over enemy airmen.

Hammering ceaselessly at Japanese remnants trapped in a coastal strip in the Buna area, Allied troops attacking from the left have driven a wedge into the enemy's defense system, and on the right "important enemy gun emplacements have been taken," the communique reported.

Farther up the coast, east of Sanananda track, the Allies were said to have made "small but important gains."

P-38 fighters swooped to the attack yesterday for the first time in the Buna area and shot down 15 of 40 Japanese planes supporting the enemy garrison, the bulletin added. Only one P-38 was slightly damaged.

Over New Britain, Allied bombers meanwhile heavily damaged four enemy ships off Rabaul in an attack on shipping and port facilities at night.

and navy vessels, up 9 per cent; merchant vessels, up 26 per cent, and other munitions, up 9 per cent.

"Many items that are needed most in the type of warfare now being waged in North Africa are among those rolling off assembly lines in greatly increased quantities," Nelson said.

He said that most factories have not scheduled their operations to more than half of the theoretical limit of 168 hours per week. A few, however, are approaching maximum utilization. He added that productive manhours would be increased by almost half if utilization of all plants were brought up to maximum.

Nelson said that the output of single-engine pursuit planes showed an "unusual" increase. Production of medium bombers and smaller transport planes "leaped forward," and navy fighter production also showed a marked gain, he said.

"From now on deliveries of airplanes should increase considerably from month to month, as new plants come into operation and progress is made in production and material scheduling," he reported.

MANSFIELD, OHIO, MONDAY, DECEMBER 28, 1942.

Only three more shopping days to buy your December war savings bond.

That 5 per cent deduction, effective this week-end, is called a "Victory tax"—which at least gives it a sugar coating.

There's a movement on foot to send a group of Americans to Russia to see how they make synthetic rubber. The Japanese were more farsighted as they were sending their observers to the United States to report on how things were made long before they needed them.

Leadership Passes To General Giraud

EVEN smoother sailing for the Allies in North Africa may now be expected as leadership of the French forces passes to General Henri Giraud, who has also been granted full civil authority.

With Giraud in the position of high commissioner there will be none of the questioning of loyalty that became so pronounced in the case of the late Admiral Darlan, for Giraud has a consistently maintained record of anti-Axis thought and action and his place among the Fighting French is well established.

Just a few words were needed by General Giraud to tell his countrymen, and the world, what he has in mind. "Only one thing counts," he said, "France and her empire; there is but one aim: Victory. I ask all to stand united behind me, to assure, with the support of our allies, the success of our armies."

Just how soon "the last German and Italian will be driven from North Africa" cannot be foretold, but this is one important phase of the fighting which must proceed to completion, and in which all Fighting French may now be expected to join more whole-heartedly with American and British allies than heretofore.

The United States is now so widely represented on fighting fronts over the world that interest necessarily divides, but for the next few days—possibly weeks—developments and military action in North Africa will probably be such as to hold at least a fair share of public attention.

Avoid Isolationist Influence

REMEMBERING the extent to which isolationists in congress were able to hamper the nation's military preparedness program before Pearl Harbor, there is a natural feeling of concern over what may happen in the new congress if temporarily-quieted isolationists are placed in position either to influence military action during the remainder of the war or to complicate foreign relations during the period of reconstruction after the war.

This is particularly applicable to the personnel of the senate foreign relations committee in the new congress, and it is somewhat startling to hear from Washington that there is a possibility of isolationists, or isolationist sympathizers, getting control of this committee, or deadlocking it on matters of foreign policies.

This dangerous possibility comes about through Republican demands, based on November election gains, for two additional members on the foreign relations committee, and the likelihood that, if this point is gained, recommendation for appointments would be made by isolationist Senator Gerald P. Nye, of North Dakota, as chairman of the Republican committee on committees.

Information is given that this committee, in the past session, included six Republicans and three Democrats identified as isolationists before the attack on Pearl Harbor, and that the addition of two more supporters of isolationist ideas could seriously hamper post-war plans for United States co-operation with other nations in reaching agreements on methods of establishing and maintaining world peace.

Only four holdover Republicans in the senate have consistent non-isolationist voting records before Pearl Harbor —Austin of Vermont; Bridges of New Hampshire; Gurney of South Dakota, and Ball of Minnesota. If Republicans are to gain further representation on the foreign relations committee the selection should be from among men who were awake to the national peril BEFORE the Japs struck at Pearl Harbor.

Profitless Production of Coal

RECORD WAGES are being received by workers in all lines of endeavor, but the coal industry leads the parade. By contrast, lack of profits have prevented the industry from earning anything on its invested capital for the last seventeen years. In fact, for long periods coal operators ran in the red.

In the 12-year period from 1928 to 1939, inclusive, an average of 587 coal companies in the nation made an average yearly profit of $17,600. But in the same period an average of 1,440 companies suffered an average yearly operating loss of $43,690! These are the government's own figures, from the United States treasury reports on corporations.

The reasons for the losses are not hard to find. Sixty-two cents out of every dollar received from the sale of coal is paid out in wages. Taxes take 11 cents; supplies and equipment, 10 cents; selling costs, 6 cents; royalties, 3 cents; power, 3 cents; depreciation, 2 cents; depletion, 1 cent; insurance, 1 cent; and administration, 1 cent.

Unless coal men are allowed to earn a little more profit, the alternative will ultimately be government subsidies, and they are costly for the taxpayer in lieu of a legitimate profit to an industry.

Opinion of Japanese Air Fighters

AN AMERICAN torpedo pilot with the U. S. fleet in the southern Pacific makes an interesting observation. The Japanese fighters were a lot tougher six months ago, he says, than now. His verdict seems to be corroborated by current accounts of air fighting in that region. Day after day come reports of the enemy being knocked out of the sky at the rate of four or five Japs to one American.

"It may be," says the pilot, "that they are running out of experienced men. Or maybe we are just getting a little tougher ourselves." It might be both. It seems clear that the Japs are easier to fight in the air than on land. Since American air power is superior to the enemy's and presumably will remain so, getting to Tokyo will continue to be easier by air than by sea.

Washington has issued a warning against an excess of optimism—which in no instance should go above 65 degrees.

THE REAL PINCH HASN'T EVEN STARTED YET

How Wage Stabilization Operates

This is the third of four articles prepared by the Office of War Information to explain in simple terms the government program for economic stabilization.

EVERYONE understands why the cost of living has to be controlled.

And it is clear that wages had to be stabilized so that costs of manufacturing and farming—and therefore, prices—could be kept where they are.

But why was Sept. 15 selected as the date for stabilizing wages? Why not Aug. 15? Or Oct. 15?

The selection of Sept. 15 was a logical choice.

Let's see why.

It was in January, 1941, that wages and prices both started to climb. The cost of living went up 15 per cent between then and April 27 when President Roosevelt delivered his message against inflation and set the basis for stabilization.

The emergency price control program was introduced in May and stopped increases in most of the basic costs of living.

Some things, however, were still unharnessed. Such foods as eggs, cheese, butter, chickens, potatoes and flour—farm products—continued to rise in price. And rents, outside of certain defense areas, kept on climbing.

Until the prices of these things were brought under control, it would have been unfair to stabilize wages. And until wages were held steady, it was not possible to control production costs. That is why the early price ceilings were under constant pressure. It was even necessary to raise some.

Finally, on Oct. 2, congress gave the president power to stabilize the previously uncontrolled living costs.

The president ordered these prices stabilized immediately at what they were on Sept. 15, whenever it was practical.

* * *

NOW AT LAST, 90 per cent of the food used by the average household was sold at controlled prices. All rents were stabilized. Even the basic costs of production were under control—all except wages.

There remained one more step that had to be made before we could feel sure that we had inflation stopped. That step was stabilization of wages.

Most wages had been raised 15 per cent between Jan. 15, 1941, and Sept. 15, 1942. Up until Sept. 15, 1942, wages had succeeded in keeping up with prices. Therefore, wages and salaries were stabilized at the Sept. 15 date, a date considered fair to every one.

Suppose a man or woman work in a plant that has not increased its wages 15 per cent since January 1941. Does stabilization mean that those wages will be frozen where they are for the duration? Not at all. The National War Labor board has adopted a policy under which it will consider increases in such situations. But only by groups, bargaining units, companies or industries.

Under the board's policy, which was passed without dissenting votes by all of its twelve members representing labor, industry and the public, increases will be approved only in exceptional cases. Main exceptions will be wages or salaries which are so out of line with pay for comparable jobs in a plant, an industry or an area that they represent manifest injustices.

Any wage increases granted now might damage price ceilings. Therefore, if that is likely, an employer must file notice with the Office of Price Administration at the time that he applies for permission to raise wages.

Such a case would require authority from the director of economic stabilization — James F. Byrnes, who resigned from the United States supreme court to take this important wartime job.

THE PLACING of a $25,000 ceiling on net salaries, likewise is important. It will not help much in blocking inflation. But it does remove the opportunity for an individual to profit from war by getting a huge salary and bonus.

This $25,000 ceiling is placed on salaries after federal income taxes on earnings as well as specific allowances for meeting such debts as insurance payments have been deducted.

Except in unusual cases, the $25,000 salary ceiling will stand. So will the present wages of most workers.

The salady and wage stabilization order assures everyone of fair treatment. The boss cannot raise his own salary. Nor can the worker make more money except by increasing his production or working up to a better job.

This gives equality of sacrifice a real meaning. It puts everyone in the war, and every one must work, fight and sacrifice until victory is won.

Listen World!

As Wide as Life

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

AFTER he was gone, there was something yet more terrible to bear. I kept seeing his face.

It had been such a gallant young face, brave, sensitive and eager, tempered by pain to an understanding beyond his age! For twenty-one years it had been the only face in the world to me; and now, on every hand, I saw it again.

A youngster would run laughing down the street. A blond head would flash by me in a crowd. I'd see a tanned young neck, half child, half man; a thin boy's hand, still gangly at the wrist

Just glimpses!

But for a second my heart would leap in welcome; and then, remembering, go mad with pain!

His face! That's all I saw first, black months of grief. That's all I cared to see. One dear, dead face filled all my heart and life.

If you're a mother you will understand. You'll know how grief can blind one's eyes like that; blot out all other children.

So it was with me. I only wanted him. When he was taken, I had nothing left.

That awful feeling that you've nothing left: That bankrupt feeling, watching other mothers' joy, thinking "from now on I'm shut out of that."

No one to call you "mother" any more.

No one to come to you with some small, foolish need.

No one to comfort, cheer, or scold a bit.

All gone!

"God, take me, too!" I prayed in agony. "My work is over. I'm not needed now. Then let me go, God! Do not hurt me so!"

I prayed that way. Why did God stay so dumb? Why could I not die quickly, as I longed to die?

And then -- so slowly — back God's answer came.

That bright young face that seemed to me my boy?

THAT WAS MY BOY!

Those fumbling hands; that sensitive wide mouth; even the note that rang within that laugh; even the way those swift, young feet were set --

They seemed so like my boy's!

THEY WERE MY BOYS!

FOR EACH BOY IS PART OF EVERY BOY--

AND MOTHERING CAN BE AS WIDE AS LIFE!

My son's frail body had been laid away. But still his courage lived in other lads. And still his laughter rang in other throats. And still his need went on in other hearts.

A youngster's need of understanding love. That called to me from out of a thousand lives. I was not robbed. I was not shut outside.

I STILL HAD SONS — I WOULD TAKE THEM IN!

I WAS A MOTHER STILL—IF I WOULD CHOOSE TO BE!

And so my prayers were answered, not by cowardly escape, but by the gentle miracle of love.

I had cried out for my son. Then, here he was!

Each face that flashed before me was his face!

Each hand that reached out toward me was his hand!

I was not bankrupt.

EVERY CHILD WAS MINE!

Interpreting the War News

Burma Advance Suits Strategists Favoring Steady Check on Japan

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON—The recent invasion of Burma by the British intensified the controversy here as to whether the plan of concentrating everything possible to knock out Hitler, leaving Japan to be polished off afterwards, was sound strategy.

Some highly placed officials have taken no pains to conceal their conviction that such a policy would cost America and Britain dearly in lives and treasure. They think that every day Japan is left to exploit the resources of Java, Malaya, Sumatra, Borneo, the Philippines and the remainder of her conquests, will make it much more difficult to defeat her.

Further, they think time is working FOR Japan, and AGAINST Hitler. Not that anyone holding this theory disapproves of the North African campaign. But mostly they think that campaign should be limited in scope, no matter how successful.

TO ILLUSTRATE their view of limitation, they want the Nazis and Italians driven completely out of Africa. Following that they would approve seizure of various islands, including Crete, and perhaps Sardinia and Corsica, though not necessarily the latter two.

They would have air power concentrated at strategic points on the North African coast and on the islands now held and to be captured, for a continuous attack on Italy, Nazi installations in Greece, etc. This, they point out, would achieve what they regard as the greatest possible effect at the least possible cost.

Decidedly they would not plan an invasion of Continental Europe by British and American forces. Their program would permit the use of the Mediterranean to supply Russia through the south, while making utterly impossible Nazi gains in the Caucasus next summer.

It would bring about so much trouble in Italy that not only would this lesser Axis partner be unable to supply Germany with planes, guns and machines from its formerly highly efficient factories (before the RAF rains on Italy began), but would provoke a situation inside Italy which would require large numbers of German troops to control.

With a sufficient force retained in North Africa to prevent any surprise moves by Germany, those holding this view of the better strategy would then have both Britain and America concentrate on Japan.

IT IS WELL KNOWN at present, they point out, that Japan's chief weakness is ships to supply her far-flung expeditionary forces. It so happens that Burma would be an excellent place to force the fighting if we can deliver the force there, because supplying of the Japanese forces in that area requires sea transportation.

They reason further that the British could take as heavy toll of Japan's convoys to Burma as the Nazis have been taking of our convoys to northern Russia, with the very important difference that we can produce the ships as fast as they are sunk, whereas it is confidently believed that the Japanese will be unable to do so. In fact the strain on her transport and supply fleet is already evident.

Despite all these arguments, however, the predominant thought of those who will make the decision still seems to be to crush Hitler first.

Fire Losses Decrease But Warning Sounded

(Editor's Note—In the following article, written especially for International News Service. Delbert Johnson of the Safety Research institute tells of the sharp reduction in fire losses during the year drawing to a close but warns that the shortage of fire-fighting equipment makes vigilance imperative during 1943.)

NEW YORK—Fire losses for the first ten months of 1942 were $13,038,000 less than for the corresponding period in 1941, according to the national board of fire underwriters. The January through October figures for 1942 were $254,236,000 as compared with $267,274,000 for 1941.

Stating that these figures are "surprisingly good for a war period," the N.B.F.U. believes that the improvement is largely due to more extensive training on the part of municipal fire departments and wider public interest in fire safety.

DURING World War I, when the rate of destruction by fire was 40 per cent greater than it is today, the public was not threatened with enemy bombings, and hence the fear of fire and effective measuers to cope with it did not keep pace with the ordinary hazards of increased production and a speed-up of civilian activity.

Today, housewives, factory workers and even school children are being taught how to prevent and control fires. As a result, "first aid" fire-fighting devices play an increasingly active role in putting out small fires and in keeping them from spreading. It is estimated that from 50 to 90 per cent of all fires that start in factories and public buildings are put out with hand extinguishers.

Fire protection authorities warn, however, that a relative improvement in 1942 fire loss statistics should not lead to complacency.

A large number of serious fires have occurred in war industries, and 1942 has witnessed two of the worst fires in the nation's history -- the loss of the Normandie which deprived this country of one of the best potential transports afloat, and the Cocoanut Grove holocaust which took approximately 500 lives and was the worst disaster of its kind since the Iroquois theater fire in Chicago in 1903.

In addition, 1943 faces a serious shortage of fire-fighting equipment, ranging all the way from fire trucks to extinguishers.

To cope with this problem, civilian fire defense bodies urge that all existing equipment be carefully conserved. Fire extinguishers should be inspected, and, if necessary, recharged at least once a year. Similarly standpipe hose, sprinkler systems and other devices should be inspected periodically to protect them from deterioration as well as from malicious tampering.

Watching Trends

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—With time to digest the effects of the appointment of Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard as wartime food administrator, it is becoming increasingly apparent that Mr. Wickard is czar in name only.

Here's why: In order to be food "czar," Wickard has to settle, among other things, the primary matters of (1) Price ceilings; (2) Rationing of foodstuffs; (3) Farm labor; (4) Farm machinery; and (5) Transportation of farm products.

In the case of price ceilings, he is entirely dependent on the price administrator and his overlord, Economic Stabilizer James F. Byrnes. There is also congress. If congress should decide in January to legislate farm prices or change the basis of farm price controls (parity) then Mr. Wickard would be further bound by that legislation.

As for rationing, here again Byrnes and the price administrator hold the whip hand. In the field of rationing, however, Mr. Wickard is not likely to have a great deal of trouble, because shortages force the issue. No one is going to hold out against rationing when those shortages become self-evident.

ON FARM labor, Mr. Wickard is entirely dependent upon orders and decisions of Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt. It is estimated that it will take 12,000,000 farm workers to grow and harvest next year's agricultural products. The supply will probably not be over 8,000,000—and many of these or any additional that can be found will be inexperienced.

For farm machinery, Mr. Wickard will have to look to the War Production Board and its priorities division. WPB limits the manufacturer of farm machinery to 20 per cent of the 1940-41 production. With Wickard demanding staggering production of necessary crops from the nation's farmers, he has to tell them that they will have to get the job done with 80 per cent less farm machinery than they were buying in pre war days.

As for farm transportation, that's up to Defense Transportation Coordinator Joseph B. Eastman, Rubber Administrator William Jeffers and to some extent, Oil Coordinator Harold L. Ickes.

NOW, does it become apparent why Mr. Wickard is "czar" by name, but mostly still just the hard-working secretary of agriculture?

There is one important difference—important only to that extent to which Mr. Wickard can get cooperation. Under his new orders as food administrator, he is wartime equal of all these men and, being a cabinet member, may be able to get a more sympathetic ear at the White House than most of them.

As a matter of fact President Roosevelt took cognizance of the plight of Mr. Wickard by issuing a special order that in any controversy between Wickard and other wartime "czars," Byrnes would act as the president's agent and have final say. Actually, that may strengthen the agriculture secretary's hand, but actually also it might make Byrnes the food czar, not Wickard.

A Farmer's Diary

To Square a Debt

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

I WAS driving home from the city, when my engine began to misbehave. On the steepest part of a rise, it stopped, and then started from the momentum of the car—but it slowed my speed, and before the crest was reached, it stopped again.

The afternoon was very cold, with a gale from the northwest. I examined the cables to the battery, then the carburetor, the distributor points, fuel pump, the wiring beneath the dash. Shivering, I got in and tried to start. It coughed and spit, turned over a few times and fizzled out.

I sat inside to avoid the wind and get warm while I watched bleak grayish skeins of snow run nimbly, like living things, along the concrete highway. Gaunt bare trees roared in a nearby woods. It was a cold day. My car was stalled, with engine dead.

A man came by in a Plymouth at least six years the junior of the one I drove. "What could I do to help?" he wondered.

"Get behind, with your car, and push. It may start — it does sometimes," I offered hopefully.

He nodded, and like a careful locomotive engineer, he eased his car so skillfully against my bumper that I did not even feel it touch. We started slowly, then faster, and I shifted to high gear. He pushed me nearly two miles, and my engine was still as lifeless as when we started.

I motioned for him to stop and went back. "Would you push me to the village, and into a garage?"

"You bet. I will—hop in and drive," he said, with a smile and a forward wave of his big hand.

Without much delay, we reached the garage on a cross street. A mechanic pushed up the entrance door, and I coasted in while my good friend reversed his car and stood outside. I hurried out to thank him and pay him for his trouble. "You have pushed me eight miles at least," I said. "I am much indebted to you."

He smiled. "Brother, you don't owe me anything!"

"But why not?"

"I'll tell you, if you care to wait and hear. I'm a traveling man. The other day, south of Cleveland, a fine re-cap blew out for me, and then my spare went down. It was after midnight, and foggy. I went to a farmhouse to phone. The farmer was in bed, but he got up and invited me to warm myself, but he said he 'reckoned phonin' wouldn't do no good—all the stations had closed at 10 o'clock. To make it short, he had a tire in his barn that he'd patched up for his trailer. He gave it to me. He had to put on his boots and get it, and then he went down the road with his lantern and helped me put it on. When I tried to give him a five-dollar bill, he said, 'Twasn't money I did this for—you was needin' help. Do as well for the next feller, and the bill's paid!'"
